300 CHINESE DIE IN NEW BRIGAND DRIVE BY JAPAN

Sanguine Clash Seen if Marshal Chang Keeps Troops in Chinchow.

AIR BOMBING TAKES HEAVY DEATH TOLL

Many Hurt in Nanking Riots Protesting Failure to Resist Operations.

(Associated Press.)

Japanese military headquarters in Mukden have started an intensive campaign against bandits in South Manchuria and dispatched three detachments to eradicate them. Three hundred Chinese were reported to have been killed in the operations.

Informed circles in Tokyo predicted a sanguine Sino-Japanese clash unless Marshal Chang Hsuen-Liang withdraws his troops from Chinchow. Gen. Honjo was reported to have served a final warning on him to that effect.

A spokesman for the Chinese government in Nanking reiterated that Chinese troops in the Chinchow area would not be withdrawn and would resist in the event of a Japanese attack. Foreign Minister Koo withdrew his resignation and planned to carry on.

The drafting committee of the league council in Paris conferred with Japanese representatives over their compromise resolution, but reached no agreement which would guarantee peace.

Japanese and Chinese delegates to the International Trades Union Congress in Moscow appealed to the working masses of both countries to unite against what they term "the imperialistic war in Manchuria."

War on Bandits.

Mukden, Manchuria, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A marked revival of the Japanese army's operations against Chinese bandits in areas adjacent to the South Manchurian Railway zone was observed today.

Reuters News Agency reported that 300 Chinese were killed when Japanese airplanes bombed bandits at Kungtaipu, southwest of Mukden, and at Tienpingtai, near Hsinmintun.

Part of the Japanese battalion stationed at Changtu Station, between Kaiyuan and Szupingkai, was said in a communique from Gen. Honjo's headquarters to have been dispatched against a concentration of guerrillas in the neighborhood of the walled City of Changtu.

Japanese headquarters obviously attached special importance to this operation, which was said to have resulted in the disarming of "considerable numbers" of bandits, because the scene is only 30 miles northeast of Fakumen, reported to be the stronghold of force from the Twentieth Brigade of regular Chinese infantry.

Villagers Take Refuge.

A Japanese detachment at Hsinmintun similarly was sent to suppress bandits reported to be looting Tsailipo, north of Hsinmintun. The villagers were said to have taken refuge in Hsinmintun until the trouble is over.

A third expedition took form of an aerial demonstration which

Fire and Blast Hit Building in Chicago

Elevated Trains Held Up 2 Hours in Loop Area; None Is Injured.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Fire and an explosion of undetermined origin destroyed a five-story office and store building in the Loop tonight, held up elevated trains to the North Side and suburbs for nearly two hours, and for a time threatened to reach other nearby buildings.

None was reported injured in the fire, although several persons passing the building were thrown down by force of the explosion. Traffic was left snarled, elevated trains being unable to enter or leave the Loop on several lines. Among the trains held up were several of the North Shore Line, between Chicago, Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities.

Firemen estimated the damage at $150,000. More than one-third of the city's fire-fighting apparatus was used to combat the flames. Efforts to save the building were abandoned soon, and firemen concentrated on preventing the flames from spreading to nearby hotels, office buildings and stores.

Spanish Ship in Distress After Collision at Sea

Hull, England, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The British trawler St. Gatien, arriving here with her bows flattened, reported today that she had been in collision with the Spanish steamer Arnotegi Mendi off Flamborough Head in the North Sea and that the latter was flying distress signals when last seen.

A message from Bridlington said an C O S had been received from the Spanish steamer Manu, saying she was helpless in a gale 100 miles off that point in the North Sea and her fuel was exhausted.

Roosevelt's Aid Here As Ohio Booms Baker

Former War Secretary Is Not Connected With Move, Head Says.

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A State-wide organization to draft Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination is in progress of formation, Martin L. Davey, of Kent, Ohio, former member of Congress and Democratic nominee for governor in 1928, announced today.

In a previous statement Davey had referred to the movement and had intimated it would become Nation-wide in the immediate future.

In making the announcement Davey said that Mr. Baker is not a candidate for the nomination and that the Clevelander is in no "remote sense" connected with the State-wide movement.

Davey characterized the plan as "spontaneous and widespread" and as founded upon a real public demand for Mr. Baker to enter the race, a de-

Farley Talks Over Plans With Democrats and Foresees Victory.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

James A. Farley, husky driver of the Roosevelt band wagon, came to town yesterday and added his own bit to the excitement that a new Congress and a horde of "hunger marchers" have generated in the Capital City.

Mr. Farley, who is Democratic State chairman of New York, State boxing commissioner and manager of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign for the Democratic nomination for President, took over a large suite in the Mayflower Hotel for the few hours he was in the city.

Thither went a half dozen or more senators and representatives who already are on the Roosevelt band wagon. They reported to Farley and he reported to them.

Farley afterward told reporters he was more convinced than ever that

ARMED REBELLIONS AGAIN MENACE PERU

Fighting Follows Capture of Several Towns by Rebels; Strikes Declared.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—A series of armed and passive rebellions against the provisional government was reported tonight in official and unofficial advices from the central and northern sections of Peru, describing fighting between loyal and insurgent elements.

The American mining town of Cerro de Pasco was seized by rebels Friday, and loyal forces regained control of the place only after battling the revolutionaries. Scores of "political strikes" were reported from the agricultural regions in the north. In Lima more than 40 persons were imprisoned, charged with attempting to revolt last Friday night.

The widespread movement against the government was attributed in many quarters to dissatisfaction over the election of Lieut. Col. Luis M. Sanchez Cerro to the presidency. Sanchez Cerro, who was head of the military government following the 1930 revolution, is to be inaugurated president Tuesday.

An official communique said that a large group of men, headed by Capt. Molina, captured the small garrison at Cerro de Pasco Friday night. Three detachments of police were rushed to the scene and succeeded in dominating the situation Saturday night after a battle with the rebels. Among those taken prisoner were Capt. Gonzalez, chief of the Department of Huanuco, and Lieut. Zapata, of the Cerro de Pasco police. The number of casualties, if any, was not revealed.

At Cajamarca, in the north, a group of individuals, headed by Nazario Chavez, director of the newspaper El Peru, assaulted and took possession

Woman Here to Share In $20,000,000 Estate

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—One-fifth of the $20,000,000 estate of the late Dan F. Sullivan, the richest man in Texas, will be inherited by his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Clem, wife of Maj. Gen. John L. Clem, of 1870 Wyoming avenue, Washington, D. C., it was learned today.

The will of the millionaire, who died last week, failed to mention specific heirs. Under Texas inheritance laws, the estate will be divided between Mrs. Clem, her two brothers and a sister and Mrs. Clem's niece.

MOSLEM DELEGATE CLUBBED AT PARLEY

Is Set Upon and Beaten With Sticks as Conference on Caliph Opens.

Jerusalem, Palestine, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Violent factional strife, in which one delegate was severely beaten, broke out tonight at the opening of a Moslem conference here.

An Egyptian delegate, Suleiman Bey Fawzi, was set upon and beaten with sticks until he dropped, after he had interrupted the reading of greetings from Nahas Pasha, Egyptian Nationalist, with a shout for King Fuad.

The meeting opened at the Mosque of Al Aosa, after a steady downpour of rain had prevented a procession of Moslem banners to the temple area of Jerusalem.

Protection of Moslem holy places is an outstanding question before the conference and it was over this that the outbreak of feeling occurred.

"All present must take an oath to protect this holy place with the last drop of their blood," shouted Dr. Abd El Hamid, an Egyptian delegate.

"Allah, Allah," shouted the whole assembly as it arose in a prolonged demonstration, the cry echoed by shrill screams from veiled women in the adjoining women's mosque.

Egyptian politics then came to the fore with an expression of greetings from Nahas Pasha, head of the Wafdist (Nationalist) party, delivered by a Cairo delegate, Abd El Rahman Alazam. Immediately Suleiman Bey jumped to his feet.

"There is only one man in Egypt and that is King Fuad," he shouted.

As he was beaten by enraged opponents, the Grand Mufti of Jerusa-

Prince Nicholas Quits Land in Row With King

London, Monday, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Prince Nicholas, of Roumania, has left Bucharest for "an unknown destination," the Daily Herald correspondent at Vienna reported today. The correspondent said the departure of the prince was announced officially at Bucharest.

Prince Nicholas has been threatened with exile since he eloped with Mlle. Lucia Deletj, a commoner, several weeks ago. His brother, King Carol, vigorously opposed the marriage and ordered Nicholas to abandon his bride. The prince refused, despite Carol's threats to cut off his income and rob him of all honors in Roumania, including his post in the army.

Newsboy Group Kills Lad For Beating Club Member

Leader and Three of Vengeance Squad Admit Shooting Youth on Steps of Home on Complaint of Lad 11 Years Old.

Detroit, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A "vengeance squad" from a club of newsboys shot to death 15-year-old Joe Przystas today because, they claim, he had beaten one of their younger members.

Stanley Orlenski, 14, president of the club, admitted, police said, that he fired the shot that killed Joe but claimed he had intended only to frighten him. He is held, as are Joe Sawicki, 14; Anthony Mazur, 14, and Longin Jendzyenski, 11, upon whose complaint, Stanley said, the revenge machinery of Floyd's club was set in motion.

Police were undecided what would be done with the youthful slayer and the boys held as his accomplices.

Assistant Prosecutor T. A. Kennedy said the boys told him there was a special meeting of the "Floyd's Club" membership in its hayloft clubrooms this morning and that it was then decided Przystas should be punished.

From there, Kennedy said, the Orlenski, Sawicki and Mazur boys went to the apartment house where "Little Joe" Przystas and the boy he was accused of mistreating lived.

Longin told them he would try to find "Little Joe," but no search was necessary as he came around a corner of the building just then with a coal scuttle.

Stanley drew a small caliber rifle from his trousers leg and, he says, fired at the coal scuttle, shouting, "We'll teach you to beat up Longin."

But the bullet missed its mark and struck "Little Joe" just above the heart.

The three older boys fled, but Longin remained and helped carry "Little Joe" to an ambulance after his sister had found the body.

Longin did not tell what had happened until questioned several hours later by policemen, however, and until the body reached receiving hospital it was believed the boy had fallen.

"Little Joe," a ninth grade honor student at Greusel Intermediate School, supported his mother and two sisters by selling newspapers out of school hours. The family had no other income except a small pension.

The boys were held in the Juvenile Detention Home tonight and will be taken into Juvenile Court tomorrow.

EXPERTS MEET TO SCRUTINIZE GERMAN DEBTS

Conflicting Opinions Are Expressed at Informal Conference.

YOUNG PLAN UPHELD BY FRENCH MEMBER

Reich Delegation Wants Complete Revision of Payment System.

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The committee of banking experts called to advise the World Bank and the great powers on the ability of Germany to continue paying reparations met informally today preliminary to their official conference tomorrow.

The various delegations spent the day exchanging views, but took no action on appointment of the four additional members of the committee permitted by the Young plan. Those likely to be named are Oscar Rydbeck, of Sweden; R. G. Bindschelder, of Switzerland; Prof. H. Colijn, of Holland, and a Jugoslavian.

Walter W. Stewart, the American delegate, arrived early this morning, accompanied by Woodlief Thomas, his aid, and spent the afternoon conferring with his co-workers, notably Emile Francqui, the Belgian financier. He refused to say whether he would accept the presidency of the committee as has been suggested.

Will Study German Report.

It was said tonight that after electing a chairman the committee would make a decision on the four optional members and adjourn to study the documents which the German delegation will present on the Reich's financial condition. One bundle of statistics already has been handed to the committee.

A spokesman for Dr. Carl Melchior, head of the German delegation, told the Associated Press that soon after the conference opened he would insist that the committee decide whether it was going to examine Germany's capacity to pay or merely devise a plan to replace the Hoover moratorium on July 1, 1932.

Two schools of thought established themselves during the day's conversations. Professor Charles Rist, French delegate, said: "I came here within the framework of the Young plan and I expect to stay therein."

Opposite Stand.

Dr. Melchior's spokesman said: "A complete examination of the entire ability to pay is necessary."

The belief in reliable quarters was that the committee would accept the French thesis. It was pointed out that to follow the German contention would mean throwing overboard the Young plan, for it forbids the committee to touch unconditional reparations.

Mr. Stewart, Sir Walter Layton, the British delegate, Dr. Rist and M. Francqui had a long conference tonight and it was understood they threshed out the matter of the chairmanship. M. Francqui is being mentioned along with Mr. Stewart in this connection.

French Uphold Young Plan.

Paris, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Prof. Charles Rist, French member of the world bank advisory committee meeting tomorrow in Basel, has been instructed to resist all attempts to revise the Young plan.

The committee must deal solely with means to tide Germany over the present abnormal period of economics, the French contend, and there must be no attempt to change the Young plan itself.

Banking quarters, however, are not in accord with the government policy. Bankers believe that short-term credits should be dealt with before reparations. This, they say, is the surest way to reestablish prosperity.

International bankers say that whatever is done toward making Germany pay further reparations must be considered from the point of view of politics. By that they believe that any German government which at-

Belgian Foreign Chief In England for Talks

London, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Paul Hymans, Belgian minister of foreign affairs, arrived in London today for conversations with Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade.

Although he declined to discuss the nature of the conversations other than to say the subject matter was "delicate," it was understood that M. Hymans would seek an adjustment of the new British "antidumping" tariffs to fit the particular circumstances of Belgium.

3 Children Die, Mother And Infant Hurt in Fire

Dubois, Wyo., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Three small children of Jack Anderson, a rancher, were found burned to death in the ashes of their ranch home today when the father returned from a trip to Lander, Wyo.

Mrs. Anderson and a 10-month-old infant were discovered seriously burned and unconscious a few yards from the ruins. Both may die from their injuries. The coroner blamed an overheated stove for the fire.

CONGRESS SET FOR ROLL CALL AT NOON TODAY

President Completes His Speech to Be Read Tomorrow.

ECONOMICS WILL GET FIRST CONSIDERATION

Senate's Initial Session to Be Brief, but House Will Organize.

(Associated Press.)

Congress meets today to wrestle with mighty issues in a session made significant by business tribulation, the approaching presidential election and close political divisions.

President Hoover early yesterday completed his annual message, charting for the Federal Legislature a course by which he hopes to quicken the stride of returning prosperity.

Leaders of both parties have placed economic legislation at the top of the session's program. The Hoover moratorium, taxes, agricultural problems and prohibition also are to receive early consideration.

Faced with a numerically strong political hostility in both branches, the President determined to leave his recommendations in the hands of the Republican minority in the House and the divided Republican majority in the Senate. He will seek no coalition.

Democrats Cautious.

About to take control of the House for the first time in twelve years, Democratic leaders continued their parleys with caution and harmony their watchword. They are awaiting the administration's program. They will indorse what they like.

The President read over his message to the Republican leaders—Senator Watson, of Indiana, and Representative Snell, of New York—at a White House meeting lasting until after Saturday midnight. He then sent it to the printers.

Senator Watson described it as "a forward looking, constructive document dealing principally with economics and finance."

More than 100 new voices will answer the opening roll calls at noon today in the House and Senate. There will be 92 new members in the House and 17 in the Senate, the vast majority of whom are Democrats.

All Democrats Present.

The opening session will be brief in the Senate, but the House will undertake to organize. The veteran "Jack" Garner, of Texas, is destined to ascend the coveted Speaker's throne with all 219 of the Democrats reporting present last night. The Republican candidate, Representative Snell, will not have present all of the 214 votes of his party.

Tomorrow Mr. Hoover's message will be read separately in the Senate and House. Other details of organization, including the Senate intra-Republican row over the continuation of George Moses, of New Hampshire, as president pro tem, will be worked out or at least talked out, tomorrow and Wednesday.

Budget Pleas Wednesday.

The President will transmit on Wednesday the voluminous budget carrying his recommendations for appropriations to carry on the Govern-

Berengaria in Grip Of Atlantic Storms

Cunard Flagship to Be Day Late in Arrival at New York.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Whipped by terrific winter storms, the Berengaria, flagship of the Cunard Line, today had completed half of her transatlantic voyage to New York far behind schedule and with the prospect of being at least a day late in arrival.

The giant liner has been beset by sudden gales, at times reaching 80 miles an hour, wireless advices to the Associated Press disclosed. The ship has been running in the teeth of the series of storms intermittently for four days, the wind piling mountainous waves over her decks and bringing her almost to a standstill to prevent damage to her superstructure. The headwinds have been accompanied by rain, hail and snow.

The Berengaria left Cherbourg December 2 and was due here on Tuesday. The company said tonight she would not reach Quarantine before Wednesday noon.

Man Is Fatally Beaten And His Car Set Afire

Carrollton, Ky., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Beaten with a blackjack and placed in his automobile which his attacker set afire, Theodore Fitcher, Carrollton dry cleaner, was injured fatally just outside the city limits here last night. He died five hours later in a Carrollton hospital.

Five suspects were held today for questioning, but their names were not revealed. Officers expressed belief robbery was the motive for the attack. The Carrollton firemen extinguished the flames before they reached Fitcher.

HUNGER ARMY OF 1,570 FED ON REACHING CITY; TO SEEK MONEY TODAY

5,000 at Auditorium For Marchers' Rally

Plans Voted on Moves Today at Capitol and White House.

"Delegates" assembled at the Washington Auditorium last night, following their "national hunger march," through twenty States, were called on to show "working class discipline" in today's demonstrations at the Capitol, the White House and the American Federation of Labor. Some 5,000 persons were present, hunger marchers, curiosity seekers and hundreds of police.

A committee of 50 was unanimously elected to present today's demands. Meeting this morning at 9 o'clock, this committee will break itself up into three subcommittees, which will carry petitions to the Senate, the House and the White House, respectively.

Seven resolutions presented by the resolutions committee were indorsed by acclamation. They included everything from petitions for unemployment insurance to demands for release of Tom Mooney from his California prison. Commutation of sen-

Invading Army's Plans As Arranged for Today

The National Hunger Marchers last night announced the following program for today:

9 a. m.—Special committee of 50 will hold final meeting to plan presentation of demands.

10 o'clock the marchers will start forming in columns of fours at John Marshall place and C street northwest.

11 o'clock they will leave for the Capitol Grounds by way of Pennsylvania avenue and the northwest roadway.

From the Capitol the marchers will parade to the White House, by way of New Jersey avenue, Massachusetts avenue, H street and New York avenue.

From the White House they will march to the American Federation of Labor headquarters by way of Jackson place, Connecticut avenue, Seventeenth street, L street and Massachusetts avenue.

From the Labor headquarters the marchers will proceed to the Washington Auditorium, where another mass meeting will be held.

2 Main Units Greeted by Welcoming Groups; Carry Banners.

THOUSANDS WITNESS UNUSUAL SPECTACLE

5,000 Attend Mass Meeting; Marchers Protest Food; "Strike" Is Averted.

Two armies invaded Washington yesterday, poorly clad, ill fed, arrogant armies, which demanded food and shelter in the camp of the "enemy," and got what they asked.

Today they will demand money from the United States Government, which may not be so willing.

Down the old Bladensburg pike, over which British soldiers marched on Washington more than a century ago, a column of 950 men and women, the vanguard of the national hunger march, entered the city at 3:30 p. m.

Across the District line at Wisconsin avenue a half hour later, a second column of 620 moved. Trucks and private cars were abandoned by both groups on the outskirts of the business section, and the singing, shouting "marchers" continued into Washington four abreast, forming a junction at John Marshall place. A delegation of about 25 motored up from Gastonia, N. C., in the late afternoon.

Met by Capital Police.

No disorder marked the march into the city. Participants were escorted in their trucks to the District line by Maryland motorcycle policemen. Here contingents of Metropolitan police, on motorcycles and in scout cars, awaited them.

Thousands of District motorists had driven out for the spectacle. These were waved to the side of the road by the police, who led the first column down New York avenue to Florida avenue, where the trucks were discarded. The second column moved down Massachusetts avenue, Nineteenth and M streets to Thomas circle before taking to foot.

Welcoming groups from the "Washington Arrangements Committee" greeted each column as its members left their trucks.

Curtis Relents at Last Minute.

Washington authorities made every possible concession to their demands. Even Vice President Curtis, who had put his foot down on marchers carrying banners on the Capitol grounds today, relented at a last minute conference with Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, and Herbert Benjamin, chairman of arrangements for the marchers.

So long as none of the placards are inflammatory or attack the Government, they may be carried on the grounds. Vice President Curtis finally agreed. Although Benjamin pressed his plea for admission to the Senate floor, Mr. Curtis reiterated that was impossible.

Spectators yesterday were impressed with the thoroughness of police preparations. Not only were the homes of Senator Oddie and Representative Fish, arch foes of Communism, thoroughly guarded, but extra guards were on duty at the embassies and legations, and 40 extra policemen were assigned to the White House. The full Metropolitan police force of 1,400 men was ordered on duty until midnight tonight.

5,000 at Mass Meeting.

An officer was stationed at every 100 feet around the executive mansion, and an augmented guard patrolled the Capitol. As the parade of marchers passed up the Avenue from John Marshall place to attend the mass meeting at the Washington Auditorium, the White House police guard, augmented by park policemen, stood one every 10 feet about the grounds.

More than 5,000 persons attended the mass meeting, although more than half were curious spectators who did not join in the singing of "The Internationale" and refused to stand in a minute's tribute to "martyred" comrades.

Biedencapp at Head.

Column Capt. Fred Biedencapp, of Boston, led the first group of marchers into town. He listened to a brief speech of welcome, made by Edward Suskin, who said he was a member

TREASURY WILL ASK $1,300,000,000 LOAN

Mellon Announces Amount Will Be Borrowed by U. S. Next Week.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon announced last night that for the fourth time this year the Treasury will borrow more than a billion dollars.

The Government will offer a combination of securities totaling $1,300,000,000 and dated December 15. Of this, $1,090,000,000 must be used to pay debts due on that day, leaving $210,000,000 for Government operations until March 15.

Secretary Mellon said the issue would include $600,000,000 of one-year 3¼ per cent Treasury notes, $300,000,000 in six months Treasury certificates of indebtedness bearing 2¾ per cent interest, and $400,000,000 in nine-month certificates of indebtedness bearing 3 per cent interest.

The debts falling due are $452,000,000 in 3½ per cent Treasury notes and $543,000,000 in maturing certificates of indebtedness. Interest on the public debt amounting to $95,000,000 also must be paid.

The short life of the issue was regarded as indicating an official conviction that conditions a year hence would permit repayment of the loan and that additional long-time borrowing would not be necessary.

A tax increase is one of the foremost legislative items before the Congress meeting today.

The decline in revenue, which left the Treasury with a deficit of $903,000,000 at the end of the last fiscal year, has continued into the present or 1932 fiscal year. On December 3, with only five months and three days of the year gone, the deficit had reached $856,367,587.

The slump in revenue brought the first of the Government's huge security issues last March 15. It bor-

Republican Official Is Arrested in Ireland

Longford, Irish Free State, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Hugh Quigley, secretary of the Fianna Fail (Republican party) organization in this county of the Irish Free State, was arrested today by a posse of civic guards.

The guards declined to state the nature of the charge against him. The arrest caused a sensation here

OLD-TIME RANGER SLAIN BY SHERIFF

"Had to Do It," Explains Officer After He Uses Submachine Gun.

Rankin, Tex., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A Texas sheriff today used a submachine gun to kill Graham Barnett, border county "two-gun man" and former Texas ranger, but refused to explain his action beyond saying "I had to do it."

The slayer, Sheriff W. C. Fowler, of Upton County, would make no other statement pending conclusion of a court of inquiry which began shortly after the shooting on Rankin's main street.

Tony Hess, one of two men with Barnett in the latter's automobile, said the officer halted another machine about twenty paces from the victim's car, lowered a window of the Fowler machine, thrust the muzzle of the machine gun through the aperture and began shooting.

Hess said the sheriff also called to him to "stand aside," before opening fire.

Barnett dropped to the ground with seven bullet wounds in his body. Four bullets struck over the heart, one in the abdomen, one in the left shoulder and one in the face.

Witnesses said Sheriff Fowler then stepped from his automobile and ordered Rhome Shrivers, the third occupant of the Barnett car, to come out of a filling station office, where he had fled.

After instructing that Hess and Shivers be taken to the courthouse, the sheriff searched Barnett's body and his automobile.

On the body was an automatic pistol. It had not been fired. In the automobile were two rifles and a sawed-off shotgun. It was established that the shotgun, one rifle and the automatic belonged to Barnett.

Sheriff Fowler was not placed under arrest.

Justice of the Peace D. M. Northcutt presided at the court of inquiry, while District Attorney Roy Priest, of Rankin, directed questioning.

Hess testified he came to Rankin with Barnett yesterday, and Barnett went to the county jail in an effort to see Sheriff Fowler. He said Barnett wanted to talk to the sheriff "on business." The sheriff was not in his office, however, and Barnett departed.

Two Flying Missionaries, Marooned in Alaska, Saved

Seward, Alaska, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—After being marooned in the wild Yukon country for eleven days after their airplane was forced down near Tacotna, the Jesuit missionary brothers, George Feltes and Martial Lapeyre, have been taken to Tacotna by dog team.

The missionaries, forced down on a flight between McGrath and Holy Cross, were taken to Tacotna yesterday by Charles Harland and Charles Gobel, dog-team drivers. The dog teams were dispatched to the rescue after the Jesuit brothers were located by airplane searchers.

After their arrival in Tacotna the fliers said they suffered intensely from cold and hunger during the eleven-day vigil. Their ship was grounded during a trip to isolated missions.

When a blizzard brought 20 degrees below zero temperatures, the missionaries said, they used gasoline from the plane to keep a fire going.

Then their fuel supply ran low and they suffered from cold, with no blankets to cover them. In addition, their food was exhausted.

The plane was forced down and a landing made without mishap, Brother Feltes explained, on a large open spot near Crater Peak.

The landing was made, he said, when their plane lost momentum in the air, with the engine cut off, and starter trouble prevented it catching again.

Huddling together in the plane at night, without blankets, they suffered much from cold. Within several days Pilot Harry Blunt flew over and located their camp, but a bag of food and blankets he dropped were not found, Feltes said.

As soon as weather permits, the men agreed, fuel will be taken to the plane and it will be flown to Holy Cross, their original destination.

POWERS LOVE DEATH TRIAL BEGINS TODAY

Clarksburg Agog on Eve of Bluebeard Killing Case; Crowd Gathers.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The principal actor in a drama of life and death, Harry F. Powers, "the Bluebeard of Quiet Dell," tonight preened himself for the start of his "love racket" murder trial here tomorrow.

The pudgy "mail order Romeo," who wooed scores of women all over the country, prepared to play his role by getting a haircut, having his clothes pressed, ordering a new shirt, selecting his most gaudy tie and having his shoes shined.

Not since 1923, when five "black handers" were hanged for a series of 20 killings, has this mining section known the excitement over a court case that was evident today.

Pamphlets Sold on Streets.

Despite all attempts to keep the proceedings from taking on the aspect of a "spectacle," interest was running high throughout the countryside over the strange drama that will begin tomorrow in Moore's Opera House.

On street corners boys were hawking pamphlets and bound books describing the "love secrets of West Virginia's Bluebeard."

Groups gathered throughout the city to discuss the case of the man who described himself as a "picturesque character" in his matrimonial magazine advertisements, who filled trunks with the replies he received from women all over the country, who became a small town Lothario, and who finally bought a sporty roadster, equipped with a radio, to call on his prospective brides.

Crowds Flock to Garage.

Six miles out in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, at Quiet Dell, a highway was blocked with cars of those who wanted to see the frame and red tile garage, void of windows, where Powers is alleged to have lured Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, of Northboro, Mass., Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher, of Park Ridge, Ill., and the latter's three children.

Little was left of the subterranean death chambers, where months ago investigators found trap doors, lethal gas connections and blood-stains which led them to the conviction that there all five were executed and dropped through a trap door to the dank sepulcher below.

Souvenir hunters had taken away the doors, parts of the windows and even the sod that covered the ditch in which the five bodies were found.

Washington's Kin Is Dead in Capital

Roger Chew, 57, Native of Charles Town, W. Va., Was Visiting Here.

Roger Chew, 57 years old, of Charles Town, W. Va., died after several months' illness here yesterday at the home of Mrs. A. B. Davis, at 2332 Wisconsin avenue northwest, where he had been visiting. He retired a few months ago after 30 years of connection with the Standard Oil Co. and was a collateral descendant of George Washington.

Born in Charles Town, Mr. Chew had studied chemistry and was employed in that capacity by the oil company. During most of his service he lived in Bayonne, N. J. He was unmarried and was the son of Col. Roger Preston Chew, who commanded Chew's Battery in the Confederate Army in the Civil War, while his mother was Mrs. Louise F. Chew, daughter of John Augustine Washington, last owner of Mount Vernon.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. B. M. Roszel, wife of Dr. B. M. Roszel, principal of Shenandoah Valley Academy, Winchester, Va., and Miss Margaret Chew, of Charles Town, W. Va. The body will be sent to Charles Town today where burial is to take place tomorrow or Wednesday.

Insurance Firm Aid to Be Sought

Negro Company Receiver to Attend Meeting of Commissioners.

In interest of Negro citizens throughout America, Daniel C. Roper, receiver of the National Benefit Life Insurance Co. went yesterday to New York to attend a three-day session of insurance commissioners, where he proposed to ask their cooperation in rehabilitation of the former $6,000,000 colored company, impairment of the assets of which has been set by the receiver at $2,825,000.

He regarded it as significant that in the two States where the company had not been permitted to collect premiums, the colored policyholders had kept their business alive by direct contact with the home office.

Mr. Roper favored pursuing a constructive rehabilitation program before giving consideration to the alternative plan of mutualization. John T. Risher is now president of the company, having succeeded R. H. Rutherford in that capacity last June.

PLAN TO DRAFT BAKER IS LAUNCHED IN OHIO

sire, he said, that is not confined to Democrats.

"We believe," Davey said, "that he can not permanently resist the call."

Baker no longer ago than yesterday stated in no uncertain terms that he is not a candidate and that he has not consented for any one to use his name in connection with the campaign for the presidential nomination.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Newton D. Baker, advised tonight of the movement in Ohio to draft him as Democratic presidential nominee, told the Associated Press he understood that Gov. George White would "by common consent" receive the support of Ohio's delegation.

Mr. Baker said he had no knowledge of any movement in his favor.

"I understand," he said, "that it was by common consent, but wise and proper, that the delegates from Ohio should go to the Democratic convention pledged to Gov. White.

"That is my own wish and I have no knowledge of any movement to the contrary."

Mr. Baker has at no time voiced any indication of his candidacy.

FARLEY VISITS WASHINGTON AND TALKS WITH DEMOCRATS

Gov. Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation on the first ballot.

Meantime, in Ohio, a movement was getting under way to "draft" Newton D. Baker, Woodrow Wilson's Secretary of War, to get into the running for the presidential nomination.

Baker, who ostensibly is evidencing no interest in the boom, is admittedly the one man the Roosevelt people fear.

Mr. Farley, a big fellow, well over 6 feet, and a youngster compared with most Democratic chieftains, stopped off here on his way to Warm Springs, Ga., where he will confer with Gov. Roosevelt, who is now taking the cure at that resort.

Among other things, Mr. Farley said, he will discuss with the governor the advisability of his entering his name in the early presidential primaries. Thus far, Roosevelt has not even said that he is a candidate, but the time soon will arrive when he must decide whether he is to go into these primaries.

Mr. Farley left New York yesterday at a time which would allow him a six-hour lay-over here. Over the telephone he talked to Representative William I. Sirovich, of New York, and told him to round up all members of Congress who might like to confer with him.

Among those waiting to see Farley when reporters arrived at the Mayflower were Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana; Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee; Representative Lewis W. Douglas, of Arizona; Charles L. Abernethy, of North Carolina; Lister Hill, of Alabama, and Henry B. Steagall, of Alabama.

Plenty of Evidence.

After conferring with these and others, Mr. Farley said:

"In my trip through the West last July, I found plenty of evidence of strong Roosevelt sentiment in every State. Since that time I have obtained further evidence of that sentiment by virtue of correspondence and visits with Democratic leaders all over the country.

"After my conferences tonight, I am more convinced now than ever that the governor will be nominated by acclamation on the first ballot."

Questioned about the reported row between Gov. Roosevelt and Tammany, Mr. Farley said that, in his opinion, the entire Tammany delegation would support Gov. Roosevelt at the national convention.

Others of Same Mind.

Mr. Farley could hardly be expected to say anything else, but it is a fact that many other influential Democrats, some of them not necessarily friendly to Roosevelt, are making the same prediction.

Tammany, they say, has reason to believe that it would get a better deal from Roosevelt than it would from Smith.

Senator Wheeler, who was present while Mr. Farley held his press conference, later reiterated his warning that the "stop Roosevelt" movement will get nowhere.

Former Secretary Baker, the Montana senator said, is not strong in the West. For one thing, he said, Baker has been allied with big interests which in the West are blamed for the economic depression.

300 CHINESE KILLED IN DRIVE BY JAPANESE IN MANCHURIA

caused the Westward flight of several hundred Chinese troops who had crossed the river between Yingkow and Tienchuangtai and had begun to repair railway tracks which were destroyed when the Japanese occupied Yingkow late in September.

The Japanese commander at Yingkow reported to Mukden that the Chinese soldiers were menacing his command and airplanes were sent to protect him and his two companies. A spokesman for the Japanese headquarters said that the planes had neither bombed nor used their machine guns on the Chinese force.

Final Warning Issued.

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A Sino-Japanese clash on a much larger scale than in the past appeared inevitable to informed circles today unless Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang disregards the Chinese government's rejection of the neutral zone proposal and withdraws his troops from Manchuria.

The Japanese army is determined that all semblance of Marshal Chang's authority in the Chinchow area must be eradicated and is supported on this point by the civil departments of the government.

Press dispatches from Mukden reported that Gen. Honjo had issued a final warning to Marshal Chang to evacuate his forces behind the Great Wall. The fact that these messages passed the Japanese censor was taken to indicate they must have had the sanction of high authority.

It was admitted in authoritative quarters the Japanese headquarters in Mukden was planning a new campaign in the direction of Chinchow to clear the area of Chinese bandits and other lawless elements who were said to be threatening the South Manchuria Railway.

Official circles were hopeful still their objectives could be gained by peaceful means, but admitted further trouble was indicated in war office reports that the Chinese were rushing additional defense works at numerous points in the vicinity of Chinchow, with further concentrations at Newchang, Tahushan and other places.

Riots in Nanking.

Nanking, China, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Street disorders instigated by students protesting against the government's failure to resist Japanese military activities in Manchuria, reached a critical stage tonight.

Throngs of students and agitators stormed through the streets and gathered outside the garrison headquarters, loudly demanding the release of 200 of their compatriots, including 32 coeds.

A dozen policemen were injured and several public officials including the secretary of the faculty of the Central University, were attacked and beaten. Dr. Chu Kia-Hua resigned as president of the university.

The foreign office was the scene of another outbreak and Dr. Wellington Koo, who submitted his resignation as foreign minister yesterday, was remaining away from the building. His predecessor, C. T. Wang, was severely beaten by angry students and the present protests were expected to force the definite retirement of Dr. Koo, whose resignation has not yet been accepted.

SECRECY WILL VEIL BRIDGE WAR TODAY

Callers Will Be Barred When Culbertson and Lenz Begin "Battle."

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The doorbell will be disconnected when the contract bridge "Battle of a Century" begins in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson tomorrow evening.

Telephones will be plugged, a guard will be posted outside the curtained doors, and nobody will be admitted save the referees and one bridge-wise butler, who knows when to start emptying the ash trays—and when not to do so.

"For a bridge player to do his best," says Culbertson, who has $5,000 at stake on that approaching battle, "he must have quiet. He must also be comfortable."

Mr. Culbertson, who will participate with three men for at least half of the approximately six weeks' match between the systems of Culbertson and Sidney S. Lenz, sees to those details.

Places 5 To 1 Bet.

Culbertson has wagered Lenz $5,000 against $1,000 that he and Mrs. Culbertson, or another partner, will have a higher score after 150 rubbers of contract than Lenz and his elected partner, Oswald Jacoby.

Culbertson must use his own system of bidding, and Lenz must use his, which is incorporated in the so-called "official" system promulgated by Lenz and other bridge masters after Culbertson had refused to join them in what they regarded as unification to avoid confusion.

A controversy between Culbertson and the "official" group led to a challenge by Culbertson last September. The contract for the match provides that the side which triumphs shall give the winnings to specified charities.

Never has a card game attracted such attention. The four corners of the United States and bridge players of England have arranged to obtain details promptly. Even the newspaper organ of the Labor party in London has been devoting space to it. The interest reflects the mushroom growth of contract bridge, which is superseding or has displaced auction bridge more rapidly than auction put plain whist into the discard.

Match Ends January 15.

It is stipulated that the match shall end by January 15. There will be play Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, beginning at 8 o'clock. The last rubber of a session must begin before 12:30 a. m. If necessary for a finish within the time limit the referees may order afternoon sessions. The players hope to complete eight rubbers nightly. They estimate that the match will involve 1,000 hands.

The Culbertson drawing room, in which play will start, is just as nearly perfect a setting for a bridge match as any player could make it.

It is perhaps 50 feet long, with a fireplace at one end and at the other end windows looking out on a quiet court. Windows along the side open out on a street, ten stories below, on which there is little traffic in the evening. The Culbertsons live at the Chatham Hotel, on a side street, half a block from Park avenue.

There'll be plenty of cigarettes and plenty of ash trays.

"We've got 75 ash trays," Mr. Culbertson chuckled, "and a butler who is a discreet kibitzer. I always insist that our butler be a bridge player himself."

MotherOne of Four Held in Bank Theft

Cashier Identifies Three as Robbers Who Took $2,061 Loot.

Tiffin, Ohio, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Four persons, one a pretty blonde mother of two children, were under arrest here tonight in connection with the holdup and robbery of the Bettsville Banking Co. at Bettsville yesterday.

The suspects are Mrs. Hazel Bullard, 31; Alva Wilcox, 28, and John Wilcox, 51, all of Carey; and Joe Terry, 43, of Upper Sandusky and proprietor of a Carey shoe repair shop.

Mrs. Bullard, Terry and Alva Wilcox have been positively identified by Harry W. Davidson, cashier of the bank, as the trio which entered the bank yesterday and under cover of guns escaped with $2,061.

John Wilcox, father of Alva and employer of Mrs. Bullard as housekeeper, is accused of planning the holdup and directing division of the spoils.

Clarence H. Howard, Steel Magnate, Dies

St. Louis, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Clarence H. Howard, steel magnate, philanthropist and national prominent Boy Scout sponsor, died in the Christian Science Sanitarium at Boston, Mass., today, it was learned here. He was 68 years old. Death was due to heart disease.

Howard rose from a machinist's helper to be a foremost steel manufacturer. For more than 23 years he headed the Commonwealth Steel Co., of Granite City, Ill., retiring last April, two years after the company was merged with General Steel Castings. For a time he was chairman of the board of General Steel Castings.

Wilhelm Congratulates Former Aid on Birthday

Stettin, Germany, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Mellowed by the passing years, August von Mackensen, former German field marshal, observed his eighty-second birthday today on his nearby estate Falkenwalde.

Seven hundred mounted horsemen brought felicitations to the former imperial military leader. They were members of provincial riding societies, who jogged several hundred miles through countless Pomeranian villages in a ride of four and one-half days as a demonstration of their respect. Former Kaiser Wilhelm also remembered his field marshal, sending a piece of pottery and a congratulatory note.

Five Die in Mine Blast.

Petroschanj, Transylvania, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Five miners were killed today and fourteen were critically injured in an explosion in a local coal mine. Rescue work was impeded by the collapse of an underground gallery.

Mr. Tohla and Alfred Weger and his son, Alfred, jr., 6, of 2402 Third street northeast, occupants of the car driven by Tohla, were taken to Providence Hospital in a passing auto. Tohla's arm was broken.

Mary Dorsey, 21, Roberta Carroll, 15, and John Dorsey, occupants of the second car, all colored, were taken to Casualty Hospital and treated for lacerations and bruises. According to police, Williams was driving south on Eleventh street while Tohla was going west on Pennsylvania avenue.

DEPOSED SALVADOR HEAD DEFIES ARMY

Araujo Reaches Guatemala After Narrow Escape From Death.

Guatemala City, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Arturo Araujo, deposed president of the Republic of El Salvador, arrived today and issued a challenge to the military regime which overthrew his government in a brief revolt last week.

Araujo said he narrowly escaped death when rebels fired on his automobile as he left the presidential palace after it had been bombarded.

"Only the excitement of my chauffeur, who delayed in starting the car, kept us out of range of the volley," said Araujo, whose wife is an Englishwoman.

"The entire republic is loyal to the constitutional government with the exception of the capital, San Salvador. The population of Chalatenango already has revolted against the military regime.

"I am in constant touch with Santa Ana, which remains loyal to my government."

Araujo indicated that he was awaiting word as to the United States' attitude toward the revolt, hinting that he would not attempt to return if the Washington Government recognizes the new government.

San Salvador, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The following new cabinet was announced today by the military junta in control of the El Salvadorean government since last week's revolution:

Gen. Salvador Castaneda Castro, minister of interior; Col. Joaquin Valdes, war minister; Col. Jose Asecio Menendez, assistant war minister; Dr. Arturo Ramon Avila, acting foreign relations minister; Dr. Benjamin Orozco, acting education minister; Dr. Pedro Salvador Fonseca, acting finance minister.

The acting ministers will become assistants, if other permanent heads are chosen.

REPARATIONS GROUP MEETS INFORMALLY

tempted to force payments would be overthrown immediately and a Hitler cabinet would come into power.

Berlin, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—After less than two years' practical application of the Young plan, Germany has asked her creditors for a moratorium under the safety valve clause provided by that instrument.

Back of the safety valve clause is the work of an expert committee representing seven governments, creditors of Germany, which was brought into being at Geneva in 1926 and empowered to "draw up proposals for a complete and final settlement of the reparations problems."

At that time the Dawes plan had been working less than five years. Because it fixed no limit to the number of annual payments, international finance thought it best to recast accounts and place the reparation question on a different and—they hoped—permanent basis.

The committee, after exhaustive hearings in which the German experts outlined the situation in their country, mapped out three lanes to be traveled in reaching a solution of the problem.

Divisions Agreed Upon.

Annual payments were to be divided into "postponable" and into "nonpostponable" portions; deliveries in kind were to be scrutinized closely, reduced and continued for a few years; and an arrangement was to be made for postponing part of the payments in times of exceptional difficulty.

The Young plan came into force September 1, 1929, and provided for 37 annual payments of roughly $497,200,000, to be succeeded by 22 annual payments of approximately $375,000,000. For the first half of the schedule payments for service on the Dawes loan were to be added. In addition the creditor powers floated a loan of $300,000,000 for Germany.

Of the payments for the first 37 years, $165,000,000, or the amount payable by the railways, was nonpostponable. Of this amount France was to have $125,000,000 annually. The balance under certain conditions might be reduced or postponed for two years upon the appeal of Germany.

Twenty-two Payments Made.

In consequence of the plan, Germany technically has paid 22 monthly installments, President Hoover's moratorium becoming effective in July of this year. The plan was put forward as a final discharge of all Germany's liabilities to the creditor powers. It represents roughly payments of $26,000,000,000, a considerable difference from the amounts advocated by the politicians at the close of the war, ranging as high as $100,000,000,000.

Signed for America by Owen D. Young, J. P. Morgan, T. N. Perkins and T. W. Lamont, the plan differed considerably from the Dawes plan in that it fixed the total debt, established the Bank for International Settlements, reduced deliveries in kind, abandoned the "Index" and discontinued the mortgage which had been placed on the railways and on German industry.

The establishment of the bank was to facilitate handling of the reparations accounts, and capital of $100,000,000 was authorized. Wide powers were provided for the bank in dealing with payments, and its activity in extending credits to banks and nations whose currency is endangered has justified its existence.

U. S. WORKERS' GOAL FOR CHEST IN SIGHT

Director Charges Slanders Circulated Against Charity's Work.

Government departments will reach their million dollar share of the Community Chest's $2,601,000 goal by the last of the week, if contributions continue at the rate of the first few days of the campaign, Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the 1932 drive, said last night.

Expressing gratification of the showing of the Government workers, Chairman Colladay praised Thomas E. Campbell, chairman of the Federal unit, and his assistants on the committee for their untiring efforts.

"This year I find the same fine enthusiasm as that of last dominating the campaign in the departments," Mr. Colladay said. "I may be too optimistic at the start of this campaign, but I feel sure that the Government employes will reach their quota."

Defamation Answered.

"The need for relief is greater than most people think," he said. "Washington has never failed as yet. I have a feeling that Washington will again see its duty this winter and will do it, filling the Chest to overflowing."

Chest officials yesterday took action against what they claimed to be a deliberate attempt to defame the organization.

Elwood Street, director of the Chest, said that persons, either those who did not wish to contribute or those who were interested in organizations not eligible to membership in the Chest, were casting reflections and doubt on this community effort.

These slanderous allegations against the Chest take many forms, he said. Letters to the Chest and the newspapers setting forth absurd claims, and claims of coercion in the Government departments; word-of-mouth charges that officers of the Chest receive high salaries; and assertions that the Chest refuses to aid certain cases, are some forms of the attacks, he declared.

What appears to be a deliberate campaign of defamation of the Community Chest seems to have been established in Washington, fomented either by persons who did not wish to contribute and who wished to cover their lack of giving by an excuse, or by persons interested in organizations not eligible to membership in the Chest, who wish to cast reflections and doubt on this community effort, according to Elwood Street, director of the Chest.

This campaign is taking many forms, including a profusion of anonymous letters to the Chest setting forth claims that are absurd on the surface; letters to newspapers, in which claims of coercion in the collection of funds in the campaign in the Government departments; word-of-mouth charges that officers of the Chest receive high salaries and that the Chest is bringing in a high-priced man to conduct the campaign; assertions that the Chest refuses to do anything for certain cases which are cited, only to be found mythical when investigated, and various other charges, generally preceded by the quotation "I have heard" or "I understand that."

In addition to all this, the operation of the Chest office is under the supervision of a committee on office management headed by J. B. Wyckoff. Certainly this supervision, he said, insures proper handling of all Community Chest funds.

Suicide of Father Opens Door to Girl

Daughter, Who Left Home as Misunderstood, Is Free to Return.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Helen Kuprowski, 16, and modern, who ran away because she didn't like living with an old-fashioned father, can go home now.

Helen vanished in June, 1930, shortly before her mother gave birth to her sixth child. She was unheard from until this week, when her mother received a letter which said:

"I am happy and working and I love you. Father doesn't understand me. He is old-fashioned and has the ideas of the old country. I will never return unless father leaves or dies."

The father, jobless for months, three of his children in an institution, read it and said: "Don't worry, mama. Helen will be home for Christmas sure. I have a feeling she will be."

He went out Wednesday seeking work. He did not return, and Mrs. Kuprowski asked police to seek him. They found him in a furnished room, dead from asphyxiation.

Merger to Dispose Of Foreign Vessels

Roosevelt - Dollar - Dawson Combine Plans Two Superliners.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The Herald-Tribune says the new Roosevelt-Dollar-Dawson combine, approved by the United States Shipping Board, plans to dispose of all its foreign tonnage to give all of its time to development of a 100 per cent American flag shipping organization.

The combine intends to build two $35,000,000 superliners for North Atlantic traffic as soon as Congress enacts legislation increasing the present rate of mail pay for vessels of more than 20 knots.

To carry out the plan of all-American tonnage the combine would rid itself of the Atlantic Transport Line, Ltd., Leyland Line and the Red Star Line, the paper says. The shipping combination controls 181 vessels, aggregating 1,192,227 tonnage, representing an investment of $110,000,000. The major fleet includes the Leviathan, President Hoover, President Coolidge, California, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

U. S. Employe Injured When Auto Strikes Pole

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—John J. Leary, jr., 57, employe of the Department of Labor in Washington, was severely injured when an automobile in which he and Miss Maude Davidson, of Hagerstown, were riding hit a pole 5 miles south of here. He was brought to Washington County Hospital. Doctors said his hip was fractured. Miss Davidson was shaken but able to return to her home after hospital treatment.

MARCH UPON BERLIN IS DENIED BY HITLER

Asserts Nazis Will Seize Power Through Elections to Reichstag.

(Copyright, 1931, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Adolf Hitler, chieftain of the National Socialists, said today nobody in his German Fascist movement was dreaming of a march on Berlin.

Instead of a coup d'etat, he indicated his "Nazi" forces intended to seize power by election of members in the Reichstag.

"Some day, maybe very soon, there will be new Reichstag elections," he said. "That will be our 'march on Berlin,' for the overwhelming section of the German people will sweep our candidates into power."

The leader of Germany's "brown shirts" broke into an amused chuckle when informed that some newspapers were speaking of an impending march on the Capital.

"What?" he exclaimed. "March on Berlin? Why should we march on Berlin when I am here quite as much as I am in other parts of the holy German Reich?

Foes Dwindling, He Says.

"We need not march on Berlin when we already are sure of the capitulation of this citadel. Supposing an army beleaguers a fortress and knows that within a few days the enemy inside will be starved and must surrender. Would it not be arrant nonsense to organize a storm attack?

"The enemies of Nazi-ism are dying of starvation, politically speaking. That is, their adherents are dwindling while ours constantly increase.

"Wherever elections are held we land on top. Only today at Breslau in the university elections 75 per cent of the votes were National Socialist.

"March on Berlin? Nonsense!"

He declined to reveal to his interviewer the National Socialists' economic program, but intimated there would be many changes in the laws of Germany if his party were swept into power.

Gold Standard Views.

He was asked what he proposed to do about the gold standard in event he seized control of the country. After reflecting for a moment, he shrugged his shoulders.

"Let me make this general observation," he said. "The question of the gold standard depends much on the attitude of France as the strongest European gold power.

"If France insists on drawing to itself all the gold and to disgorge it only on the basis of holdup political deals, I can well conceive of a united front of the remaining world to abandon the gold standard and select some other standard.

"For Germany this question is not so important anyway, since we have but very little gold.

"To repeat, it depends upon France, what shall happen to the gold standard. National socialism desires to restore to the German people work, bread and last, but not least, honor. How that is to be done we will show you later."

Progress of Park Activities Shown

Large Acreage in Virginia Is Acquired, Director Tells Wilbur.

(Associated Press.)

Progress of National Park Service activities in Virginia was reported yesterday by Horace M. Albright, director, to Secretary Wilbur, of the Interior Department, in a report on the year's work.

During the early part of 1932, Mr. Albright said, the State of Virginia is expected to know the acreage that can be purchased with available funds. Mapping and valuing of the lands proposed for the park, he said, virtually was completed.

The Colonial parkway, between Yorktown and Williamsburg, in the National Monument, and Summit drive in Shenandoah Park were listed among the park service's outstanding road projects of the year.

In the interest of giving maximum employment on the Summit drive, Mr. Albright said, construction was split into two contracts. The right of way, 100 feet wide and 35 miles long, follows the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

BONUS BACKERS QUIT ABODE OF MARCHERS

22 War Veterans Refuse to Stay Under Same Roof; Placed Elsewhere.

Emphatically proclaiming that they were "birds of a different feather," 22 former service men—here to petition Congress for full and immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus—walked out bag and baggage from their quarters at the Salvation Army Rest when the "hunger marchers" began to file into their billets there.

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, hearing of the bonus petitioners' plight, arranged with Central Union Mission officials to house the ex-service men, who last night, while proclaiming their dislike for the attitude of the hunger marchers, felt that the latter had brought them a stroke of good fortune as they found their new quarters considerably more to their liking.

The men are part of a group of 53 former service men who started from Portland, Oreg., several weeks ago, "beating" their way on foot and by "blind baggage" across the continent to press their claims. At Stubenville, Ohio, A. B. Munce, spokesman for the group, said the petitioners were temporarily detained on suspicion of being Communists but, upon producing their Army discharges, were allowed to proceed. They have studiously avoided traveling the same paths as the hunger marchers, whom they encountered frequently on their way here, Munce said.

Munce stated that his group plans to present several representatives with petitions for full payment of the bonus.

Gandhi Reaches Geneva To Visit His Biographer

Geneva, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Mahatma Gandhi arrived from Paris tonight to be the guest of Romain Rolland, his biographer, until Friday at Villeneuve on Lake Geneva.

He was anxious to deny a published report that he had said the Indian people would resort to violence if they lost patience with Great Britain. "I would give my life to prevent violence," he said, "I suppose they would have no alternative but civil disobedience, which is the antithesis of violence."

When Washington Was Younger—No. 128

THE dedication of the District Building on July 4, 1908, is depicted in the above scene.

On the left of the picture can be seen a row of old dwellings that were torn down years ago to make room for the Southern Railway Building that is still standing, but now owned by the Government.

On the right may be seen an old building standing where the new Department of Commerce Building now stands.

HUNGER ARMY IN CAPITAL

of the World War Veterans League, and made a speech in response.

Then he supervised formation of the parade, riding up and down the line of march in a small sedan, shouting instructions through a megaphone.

There was no want of banners and signs in the column, and each of the marchers wore an armband with the following inscription:

"National Hunger March
"To Washington
"December 7, 1931
"Column 1
"Unemployment Insurance."

Ten-Foot Streamer.

Mr. Biedencapp himself led the foot march, and immediately behind him two of the marchers bore a huge ten-foot streamer, on which was inscribed in red letters, "On to Washington."

Men and women walked beside the column vending "workers'" magazines and journals for five and ten cents a copy. Still others distributed among the crowd pamphlets announcing last night's mass meeting in the Washington Auditorium.

"We want unemployment insurance" was the burden of the shouts of the marchers. The phrase was shouted in unison, and in time with the tread of their feet.

Occasional Singing.

Other groups burst into occasional songs, with "The Internationale" among the most popular.

Others improvised as they sang, to such familiar tunes as "John Brown's Body."

"Sou-oup, Sou-oup, they gave us a bowl of sou-oup" was another refrain that found heartiest expression among the marching throng.

Crowds lined the streets along both lines of march, but the spectators for the most part watched in silence. Thousands were concentrated in the vicinity of the Courthouse at John Marshall place and Indiana avenue, the terminus of the march.

Keep Ranks for Hour.

Column 1 arrived at this point first and remained standing in the center of John Marshall place until the second column moved up and joined it. At shouted commands from the column commanders, the marchers continued to "keep ranks" for the better part of an hour.

Meanwhile conferences were in progress between leaders of the Washington arrangements committee, column commanders and police. Plans had been made to quarter the women paraders at the old Fourth Precinct, but the "marchers" refused to accept. The women, numbering 82 in all, were finally quartered in an addition to the old Presbyterian Church, which is now the Twentieth Marine barracks. The men were about equally divided between these barracks and the Salvation Army Hotel. Shortly after dusk the second column started filing into the latter. Steaming stew, beans and bread in abundance awaited those of the hunger marchers, who were hungry, at Central Union Mission, and at the Salvation Army Hotel.

Protest Over Food.

Approximately 1,200 were fed at both places, but many of the marchers refused to eat what was served them, and beans and stew were thrown on the floor in profusion. The cry went up "They are feeding us slop."

A number of the truck drivers entering with column 1 refused to drive the vehicles into the city "until they were paid." A committee of leaders conferred, money was raised, and the "strike" averted.

Former Service Men Here.

Later 40 former service men deserted the ranks in a body. They were cared for separately at Central Union Mission.

As the trucks entered the city the marchers leaned out to shout at spectators along the roadside or threw out sheafs of printed circulars.

Whenever they saw Negroes they shouted: "Long live the solidarity of the Negro and the white workers. Down with Jim Crow and lynching."

Other shouts were:

"Down with charity! We want security."

"Long live the Soviet government!"

Several Negro women leaned out of their windows and shouted, "Look, there are colored fellers in there, too."

Entire Parade Orderly.

The only cheering was on Fifth street above New York avenue, where a couple of haggard-looking women looked out of second-story windows and shouted "Hurrah!"

The entire parade was orderly all the way through. Colored and white men and women walked side by side and shouted and sang. Once the marchers broke into the "Internationale," and several songs which appeared more or less a repetition of the shouts were sung.

The shout "Long live the Soviet government!" brought as many jeers as it did cheers from the marchers, however.

One truck bore a sign in which a big capitalist was depicted about to carve up a worker with a big knife, and said "We want a share."

Parade to Form at 10 A. M.

The parade to the Capitol this morning will begin at John Marshall Place and C street, at 11 o'clock. Formation will start at 10 o'clock. The procession will continue out Pennsylvania avenue to the northwest entrance to the Capitol Grounds, where, under Vice President Curtis' latest ruling, marchers will be forced to lay aside any banners that attack the Government, the President or either House of Congress.

What will happen at the Capitol Building can only be guessed, since the marchers insist they will demand the right of their committee to present their petitions from the floor of the Senate, and Vice President Curtis has just as emphatically denied them that right.

Leaving the Capitol, the marchers will proceed to the White House by way of First street to Massachusetts avenue, to H street, to New York avenue, to Pennsylvania avenue. A committee here will attempt to present petitions personally to President Hoover. It is expected President Hoover will follow his usual procedure and have the delegation received by Secretary Theodore Joslin.

On to A. F. of L. Offices.

Thence the marchers will advance on the American Federation of Labor headquarters. They will proceed by way of Jackson place, Seventeenth street, L street and Massachusetts avenue. Here a demonstration will be held against the American Federation of Labor's refusal to indorse unemployment insurance, as well as the federation's condemnation of the hunger march.

Estimates last night indicated approximately 1,600 marchers had entered the city. In the "army" entering by way of Baltimore, two columns were represented, Column 1, which originated in Maine, and Column 2, which started in Buffalo, comprising about 950 persons altogether. Columns 3 and 4, from Cumberland, Pittsburgh and points West, entered the city as a second unit, approximately 620 strong. Police estimates were lower than this, and the "marchers'" estimates higher.

Representative Fish last night asked the superintendent of police to remove pickets from his house.

Has Not Received Threats.

"I most emphatically state that I have not received any Communist threats and do not anticipate any difficulty with the Communist hunger marchers," he said in a statement.

"I have notified Superintendent of Police, Maj. Glassford, at Washington, not to picket my house, and if any police have been detailed there to remove them immediately."

Seventeen men, commanded by First Lieut. John Irwin, have been detailed for three days' active duty by the Sixth Marine Reserve Brigade to the armory annex, on John Marshall Place, in which several hundred "hunger marchers" are housed, and at brigade headquarters, on Indiana avenue, where a first aid station has been established by the medical unit of the brigade.

Rifles Are Removed.

All rifles and police chests have been removed from the armory and placed in a secure place, where an armed guard is being maintained.

The brigade communications platoon commanded by Capt. Windsor B. W. Stroup, has established a network of telephone communications between the two armories and strategic points within the buildings.

The detail has been instructed not to interfere with the marchers, but merely to protect Government in the buildings.

Friends of the Soviet Union, with national offices in New York, last night sent a letter to President Hoover charging that "the present policy of the administration in Washington to curb trade relations with the Soviet Union and to refuse recognition is responsible for hundreds of thousands of workers being unemployed." The letter "demanded" recognition and extension of credits to the Soviet Union; also "free trade relations."

Charleroi, Pa., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A second delegation of unemployed passed through Charleroi today en route to Washington, D. C. There were more than 100 men and several women in the party.

Yesterday a group of 528 went through here en route from Pittsburgh to the Capital.

Nine local marchers joined the party.

REDS ADMIT FAILURE IN 1931 TRADE PLAN

But Predict Five-Year Quota Will Be Fulfilled in Next Year.

Moscow, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The Communist newspaper Pravda admitted today that Soviet Russia had failed to fulfill its 1931 program under the five-year plan in certain branches of industry, but predicted the entire plan would be more than fulfilled in four years, or by the end of 1932.

Industrial production for the first ten months of 1931 was only 19.4 per cent over that of 1930, the newspaper said in its leading editorial, whereas the plan called for a 45 per cent increase for the whole year in comparison with last.

Causes for the failure were analyzed in the Communist party organ, which called upon the proletariat to mobilize for the work ahead and for the new five-year plan which begins in 1933.

"In 1931," it said, "industry had to work under difficult conditions and one of the fundamental causes of underfulfilling the plan was the blow dealt last winter by the lagging railway transport. The party now is devoting extraordinary attention to the bad work in transport to remove the slightest possibility of a repetition of these difficulties which were created for industry as a whole."

No less important reasons for lagging industry were found by the newspaper to be incapability of a majority of executives to coordinate work with new conditions which changed the economic and political aspects of the country, inadequate use of the cost-accounting system, which caused enormous damage to mechanical equipment because of incompetent operatives, and the widespread practice of equal wages for all workers.

All these factors were mentioned by Josef Stalin in his speech last June as basic causes for the lagging of industry and the editorial pointed out that "in those branches of economy where Stalin's six conditions were put into effect great changes have occurred for the better."

"But in the problem of quantity production," it continued, "we are below the plan and below the possibilities, although the tempo is increasing, as evidenced by October production, which increased 23.4 per cent, in comparison with October of last year."

"Our success in mastering technique," was hailed as the most important result of 1931. Pravda added that organization and production of new machinery and equipment "is making us more and more independent of foreign imports."

"Reconstruction of industry on the basis of Stalin's six conditions, a change in the work of the fuel industry, improvement of railway transport and development of Soviet trade with the aim to improve material conditions of the worker class all create favorable conditions for the industrial plan next year in such a manner that the five-year plan will be over fulfilled in four years," the newspaper said.

"Like true Bolsheviks, we must expose defects in the work of industry, and with all our means adopt Stalin's six conditions to guarantee mobilization of all inner resources."

The occasion for the editorial was the calling of the regular all-union conference of the Communist party to meet on January 30 to discuss the second five-year plan.

5,000 AT AUDITORIUM HEAR SOVIET PRAISED BY SPEAKERS

tences of seventeen marchers arrested for picketing the White House last week was asked in another resolution, while still another protested the stand taken by the American Federation of Labor in opposition to the national hunger march.

A telegram from Mooney drew a promise from the massed marchers of a birthday demonstration in his behalf today. He will be 51 years old today. Warren K. Billings, who was imprisoned with Mooney, will also be honored in today's demonstration.

At Mooney's request the marchers adopted a resolution demanding publication of that section of the Wickersham report "exposing the frame-up" of the labor leader. Mooney and Billings were imprisoned in connection with the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco.

The crowd roared its disapproval when Herbert Benjamin, chairman on local arrangements, announced the outcome of his conference with Vice President Curtis, yesterday, regarding the banning of the marchers' placards on the Capitol Grounds.

The Vice President, who had already barred the banners from the grounds, was again asked by Benjamin to allow the marchers to carry their slogans when they entered the Capitol to place their demands with Congress. Benjamin's plea was refused, he declared, because the wording of the banners was of such a nature that they were "contrary to the regulations governing the Capitol Grounds."

As the throng rose to its feet in protest to the ruling, Benjamin shouted for silence and boomed into the microphone before him:

"We would rather appear without any placards at all than have them censored by Mr. Curtis! We are a mighty force, banded together to sweep aside all opposition!"

One minute of silence was observed in honor of "sympathizers" who had lost their lives in "striving for the cause."

In a 45-minute inflammatory address, Herbert Benjamin, chairman of the local arrangements committee, drew his audience to its feet cheering by the mere mention of the Communist party and the Soviet Union. Inversely, they greeted with boos any mention of President Hoover, Vice President Curtis or Congress.

Benjamin declared Hoover "the great engineer of the stock market," and referred to the Senate as "the millionaires' club." He said the marchers demanded admission to the floor of the Senate because no "worker" is now seated there.

He quoted Senator Borah as asking him why the workers did not elect some one to represent them, and declared he had retorted "Because the price of a Senate seat is too high."

Benjamin was cheered by the marchers when he asserted "the Communists are the only ones to rule in this country."

"Workers of this country must defend their fatherland—Soviet Russia"—he shouted, "the country which has done away with unemployment."

When he hinted possible trouble today, the audience applauded wildly.

"Delegates" to the Washington Auditorium "conference" at the opening of the session, elected a credentials committee of four, a presiding committee of twenty, and a resolutions committee of sixteen. They approved the final draft of a petition to be presented to Congress and at the White House today, demanding $150 for every unemployed person, and $50 each for their dependents.

Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, "dropped in" at the meeting, and left just as quietly. He said police plans are functioning smoothly throughout, and reported no arrests and no disorders.

March Leader Protests Fare Given in Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The breakfast provided this morning by the city for 675 unemployed Negro men and women, part of a caravan treking to Washington to present demands to Congress, was termed by the leader "poor and inadequate," and the marchers were ordered to lay down the food and leave the shelter that had been made available for them.

The group turned down a menu of hot oatmeal, with sugar and milk, bread and coffee, with cream, to go to a place provided by Logan members of the Communist organization to eat dry bread, sip soup, drink coffee and divide the contents of canned goods.

Traveling in eighteen trucks and seventeen pleasure cars, the group arrived in the city shortly before noon yesterday from the New England area. They were received by police, escorted to a municipal shelter, where quarters were provided for the night.

After the capacity of the building had been reached, others were taken to a nearby building, likewise made available by the city. The members of the caravan criticized the quarters and declared the place was cold and there were not enough blankets.

Departing today for Washington the party was augmented by four trucks and eleven pleasure cars, carrying members of the local delegation.

More War Strength Held Way to Relieve Jobless

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Henry L. Stevens, jr., of North Carolina, national commander of the American Legion, today voiced an appeal for full American naval strength under the terms of the London treaty and an increase in the standing Army as aids to unemployment.

In an address before a conference of Louisiana State Legion officials, Stevens said "the regular Army is down to a point where they are simply a bunch of technicians, army college professors who, in case of emergency, would become the instructors and perhaps the higher officers and commanders of an army that would be formed when such an emergency arrives."

LEE TRIAL DEFERRED AS LYNCHING RESULT

Maryland Officials Move Silently to Punish Salisbury Mob.

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Working swiftly and silently, Maryland officials today reached out to punish all persons responsible for the lynching here Friday evening of Matthew Williams, Negro, a few hours after he murdered a lumberman who had given him employment.

Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., assured by Gov. Ritchie that the whole power of the State was at his disposal, declined to divulge his plans to bring to justice not only the leaders of the mob, but all who participated in any way.

At the same time preparations for the trial in this judicial circuit, at Cambridge, Tuesday, of Yuel Lee, Negro, accused of killing four white persons in Worcester County in October, were abruptly halted as the jurists here acceded to a defense plea and sent the records of the case to the court of appeals for review.

Pulpits Denounce Lynchers.

The members of the bench are now sitting in courts in several of the counties, and it was expected that the review would not be possible until later in the week. The only question for the jurists to decide, it was said, was whether the judges here were within legal bounds in refusing to remove the trial of Lee to the Western Shore, as had been requested by defense counsel.

Denunciation of the lynching came from several Baltimore pupits during the day. Two Eastern Shore newspapers, the Salisbury Times and the Cambridge Banner, both commented at length on the lynching. The latter paper charged the crime to "a campaign of misrepresentation" that allegedly has been carried on by Baltimore newspapers.

Attack Rumors Discredited.

The lynching was expected to result in arguments at Chestertown tomorrow for a change of venue in the case of George Davis, Eastern Shore Negro, held in Baltimore for safe keeping, on a charge of attempted assault on a Kent County white woman.

Both Lee and Davis have been in the Baltimore City Jail since their arrest and the attempt of Eastern Shore groups to seize them. Since the lynching, in which Williams was taken from the Peninsula General Hospital and hanged from a tree in the courthouse yard and then burned, rumors have been frequent from several widely separated sections on the shore of the formation of mobs to terrorize Negro settlements.

County officers and State police, after investigations, reported the rumors to be false.

Heart Attack Is Fatal To Mrs. Richard Mount

Detroit, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Mrs. Richar Mount, head of the retail merchants division of the Food Administration in Washington during the World War, died suddenly of a heart attack in her home here today.

Before the war she was in charge of publicity for the woman's suffrage movement. In recent years she has been on the staff of the Detroit Free Press. Her husband and a son survive.

of the municipality early Saturday, the communique said. The eleventh regiment, however, attacked the rebels and regained control. Twenty-three civilians were arrested.

The government is now in full control at Chosica, 25 miles from here, where Friday night a group of Apristas (members of the A. P. R. A. party, whose presidential candidate, Victor Raul Hya de la Torre, was defeated in the recent election) and Leguistas seized the power plant for three hours. The plant supplies electricity to Lima and Callao.

Railroad traffic was at a standstill at Trujillo, where farmers, laborers, white collar workers and students have declared a general strike. Similar strikes are in effect in the Chicama, Santa Catalina and Trujillo valleys.

BERRY-BEARING PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS.

THREE charming little plants which carry out the Christmas color scheme are the Jerusalem cherry, the ardista crenulata and the pepper plant. The latter is not truly a berry-bearing plant, but the effect is about the same, as the peppers are so tiny that they seem like elongated berries.

Every one knows the Jerusalem cherry, which in some respects is a worth while house plant and in other respects is not. The usual experience is to get it to grow very beautifully for a while and even set fruit; then, just when you are congratulating yourself, the lovely scarlet cherries begin to drop off, not one at a time but dozens at a time. This is usually caused by too much heat. It is best, when the plant is in bloom, to keep it in a cool but sunny room. It must be watered every day.

It is foolish to attempt to keep old plants from year to year. It is much easier and in every way more practical to raise young plants for the holidays from seeds sown in the early spring. Plunge the pots in summer in some partially shaded place in your garden and give them plenty of water at all times.

The small red peppers which are grown for the holiday season are, like the Jerusalem cherry, quite irresistible when in fruit. The varieties usually grown (Celestial and kaleidoscope) bear a profusion of small fruit an inch long, which change from green to cream color, then yellow, and finally bright red, making a happy combination with the soft green foliage. After they have lost their beauty throw them away, for it is no use to attempt to carry them over another year. They are easily grown from seed, and if they are kept well watered and in a sunny place they will retain their beauty for at least ten weeks.

Both of the above-mentioned plants are inexpensive, for they are easily and rapidly grown. The third plant, the ardisia crenulata, while easily grown from seed, is slow, and therefore more expensive. Seeds sown in March or April will bloom the following spring and have a good crop of berries the next winter. In about 20 months the plant will attain a height of about 10 inches. The arrangement of the berries, which are borne in clusters, is very decorative nestled among the dark green glossy foliage. The ardisia requires a daily drink and well-ventilated, sunny place.

All three of these berry-bearing plants are small, and therefore well adapted to growing on a window ledge.

FARMERS TO FORM PLEAS TO CONGRESS

3,000 Are in Chicago Ready to Open Three-Day Parley Today.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Three thousand farmers from 40 States assembled in Chicago under the banner of the American Farm Bureau Federation tonight for the announced purpose of "laying down the law to Congress."

Legal methods to increase market prices, reduce taxes, broaden credit sources and eliminate surpluses were some of the problems the farmers had on their program for a three-day convention, from tomorrow through Wednesday.

The delegate, all farmers or officials of farm bureau units, will decide what legislation should be enacted to bring about relief. Then they plan to put the matter up to Congress, which convenes in Washington at the same time the farmers go into session here.

Addition of an equalization fee principle to the national marketing act under which the Farm Board was created, probably will be requested in a resolution and the resolution adopted by the convention, farm bureau leaders said. As for the Farm Board itself, they said, the farmers are in favor of it and will ask that it be retained.

Farm leaders who had arrived last night for the meeting unanimously put their stamp of approval on a section of the meeting's preliminary statement that legislation will be demanded of Congress to check what they termed "unrestrained gambling in agricultural products on boards of trade and commodity exchanges."

Another resolution probably will be adopted, they said, recommending downward revision of taxes on real estate and shifting of additional tax burden to incomes.

ment during the coming year. Thursday he will send to Capitol Hill for ratification his one-year moratorium on intergovernmental debts, already in effect with a majority of Congress pledged to its support.

Hoover Recognizes Snell As Spokesman for G.O.P.

(Associated Press.)

As the Republican nominee for Speaker, Representative Snell, of New York, received Saturday night the official recognition of President Hoover as party spokesman.

He was invited to the White House with Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican chieftain, to go over Mr. Hoover's message to Congress.

House Republicans will settle tonight whether Snell or Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, floor leader last session, shall be floor leader for the party in the event the Democrats elect the Speaker.

The floor leader of the Republicans in the last Congress is convinced the Democrats will organize the House today even if he won't admit it publicly.

Saturday, 218 Democrats—enough to elect a Speaker—attended the party caucus. After the first roll call, Representative Tilson, Connecticut Republican, had his things moved out of a room over which hangs the sign: "Office of the majority leader."

Representative Rainey (Democrat), Illinois, probably will move in today.

CONTESTS ARE FILED OVER 4 HOUSE SEATS

Democratic Majority May Be Changed by Results; Oaths to Be Given.

(Associated Press.)

Four election contests in the House may widen or narrow the slim Democratic majority.

Congressional districts involved are: Illinois' Eighth to which Peter O. Granata, Republican, holds the election certificate; Indiana's Eighth, to which Albert H. Vestal, Republican, is accredited; Oklahoma's First, held by Wesley E. Disney, Democrat, and Pennsylvania's Thirtieth, held by William R. Coyle, Republican.

With the House composed of 219 Democrats, 214 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite, party leaders plan no action to prevent any of these certificate holders from taking the oath today. But their cases all will go to elections committees for reports on whether they shall retain their seats.

Mr. Granata's election is being fought by former Representative Stanley Kunz, Democrat. On a canvass of ballots, a notary public declared Mr. Kunz the real winner.

Claude C. Ball, Democrat, filed a contest against Mr. Vestal after an official count made the Republican victor by nine votes. Subsequently, however, Mr. Ball failed to take testimony and file it with the House clerk within the 90-day period fixed by law.

Mr. Disney's margin over former Representative Charles O'Connor was less than 300 votes and the Republican opened a contest.

A partial recount indicated a plurality for Everett Kent, Democrat, over Mr. Coyle.

The final decision, however, rests with the House in each case.

Miners Pay Honor To "Mother" Jones

Rites Mark Anniversary of Death of Union Idol at Silver Spring.

Mount Olive, Ill., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Organized labor today paid homage at the shrine of its famous feminine leader, "Mother" Mary Jone. In the union miners' cemetery here, where victims of the Virden riots, in which she participated, are buried not far from her own grave, a loyal detachment of the armies which she inspired on many industrial battlefields gathered to honor her memory.

Exercises were in charge of two locals of the United Mine Workers of America, the union which idolized her during her turbulent life for her unwavering advocacy of its cause in many controversies.

It was this little cemetery, some time before her death at the age of 100 years, November 30, 1930, near Silver Spring, Md., that "Mother" Jones selected as her final resting place. In a document filed in the courthouse at Carlinville, Ill., she requested that she be buried in the same soil as the miners killed in the riots of 1898.

WET AND DRY LINEUP MOVES ARE RUSHED

Repeal Plan Announced to Give Sales Control to Individual States.

(Associated Press.)

With a vote on prohibition which would echo into the 1932 presidential election likely, the eve of the new Congress found friends and foes of the eighteenth amendment busy with last-minute maneuvering.

As opponents of prohibition prepared to deluge Congress with bills to modify or repeal it, defenders of the law rallied their forces, confident of victory.

The wets claimed the biggest voting strength in Congress since the dry law became effective.

Terms of one of the scores of anti-prohibition bills to be introduced within the next few days were announced last night. Representative Andrew, Massachusetts Republican, made public a resolution to repeal the eighteenth amendment and substitute authority for the Federal Government to assist the States in maintaining their own liquor control systems.

Meanwhile the national prohibition board of strategy issued a statement under the heading, "The Wets Shall Not Pass," asserting that in the forthcoming session "prohibition will not lose an inch of ground, despite clamorous propogands mainly financed by wet millionaires."

A belief that sentiment is growing rapidly throughout the South for modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of light wine and beer was expressed by Hollins N. Randolph, of Atlanta, chairman of the advisory committee of the league for modification of the Volstead act.

Former Senator Wadsworth (Republican), New York, meanwhile said in a radio speech that "police statutes governing the personal behavior of the citizen don't belong in the Constitution."

Andrew's resolution, which will be introduced today, would retain in the Federal Government control over the manufacture and transportation of intoxicating liquor, leaving the regulation of its sale to the States. He said his plan was in line with recommendations of the Wickersham commission.

The prohibition board of strategy predicted Congress would submit no referendum to the States; make no change in the Volstead law to restore beer and wine; defeat efforts to cripple enforcement and kill "wet bills" in committees.

"Congress, reflecting the people," it said, "is conclusively dry."

Park Boundaries Changes Urged

Grand Teton in Wyoming Is Especially Favored for Adjusmtent.

(Associated Press.)

Immediate adjustments in the boundaries of several national parks, especially the Grand Teton, in Wyoming, were urged yesterday by Horace Albright, director of the Park system.

He said in his annual report submitted yesterday that important lands now held in trust for park purposes by the Snake River Land Co. should be accepted as soon as possible. About 30,000 acres are included in the area. There has been opposition to its transfer from certain groups in Wyoming.

Mr. Albright also recommended that the Kings River Canyon, in California, should be given park status. In the past it was proposed to make the Kings River area part of Sequoia National Park, but the plan now is to add the small General Grant Park to the Kings River acreage and form a new park.

Tariff on Petroleum Urged to Aid Farmers

(Associated Press.)

A tariff on petroleum was advanced yesterday by John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers' Union, as a practical form of agricultural relief.

"While legislation on the oil situation alone would not solve all the farmers' problems," Simpson said, "such legislation would quickly release many millions of dollars in payments to the farmer and would enable him to meet his difficult situation much more easily."

Former Premier to Lead Scouts.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—When Boy Scouts from all over the world gather in the summer of 1933 at Godolla, Hungary, Count Paul Teleki, former Hungarian prime minister, will be in charge, national offices of the Boy Scouts of America here announced today. Godola Camp is on the estate of the late Emperor Franz Joseph.

CHICAGO GRAFT PLOT TRIAL STARTS TODAY

1,100 Witnesses Called by State in $5,000,000 Conspiracy.

Chicago, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—A $5,000,000 graft conspiracy trial, involving nine former trustees and employes of the sanitary district of Chicago, comes before a three-judge criminal court tomorrow. Eleven hundred witnesses will be called by the State.

A truckload of records of the sanitary district will be produced in the prosecution's effort to prove the defendants misspent the taxpayers' millions in padding pay rolls, awarding contracts without competitive bidding, constructing a million-dollar bridle path beyond their prescribed province, and committing other extravagances.

Two of the nine defendants still are members of the board of trustees that supervises the drainage system of the Chicago Metropolitan area —James M. Whalen and John J. Touhy. These and six codefendants —Timothy J. Crowe, board superintendent; Frank J. Link, John K. Lawler and August W. Miller, trusees; John T. Miller, former superintendent of plants, and Martin E. Delstein, real estate agent—all were administrators of the district in 1927 and 1928. The ninth defendant is Timothy J. Connolly, former purchasing agent, a fugitive from justice ever since the indictments were returned.

Case Long Before Courts.

The case has pursued a tortuous path through the courts since the sensational purported expose more than two years ago. For six months special grand juries in 1929, supported by popular subscription and directed by Frank J. Loesch, veteran lawyer, as Special Assistant Attorney General, pored over the mass of evidence and finally indicted the officials on several counts.

Eventually the indictments were dismissed but new ones were voted, some of the counts were stricken, and at length after a brush between Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher and the special prosecutor, John Northup, the general conspiracy indictment was upheld and Judge Fisher directed the trial to begin December 7 before himself, sitting with Judges John Prystalski and James J. Kelly.

Taxpayers' Suits Filed.

All but three of the ten original counts have been stricken. Those remaining charge general conspiracy to obtain $5,000,000 of public money by false pretenses, pay-roll padding and payment of exorbitant prices to contractors building sewage disposal tanks.

An offshoot of the same graft investigation was the inquiry into alleged sinecures enjoyed by 55 attorneys on the pay roll of the sanitary district law department. Disbarment proceedings were begun and Judge Thomas Taylor, as commissioner for the State Supreme Court, has recommended nine lawyers for disbarment, eight for two years' suspension, eleven for a year's suspension and seventeen for censure.

Taxpayers' suits have been filed for recovery of the millions alleged to have been misspent.

Charity Workers Plan Chrsitmas Relief Drive

Plans for a Christmas campaign to benefit the poor of the Capital were formulated by the council and staff of the Volunteers of America at the Annapolis Hotel yesterday afternoon.

All the volunteer workers were urged by Col. C. C. Harron, regimental commander, and Lieut. Col. Frank H. Wise, regional commander, to make every effort to see that all impoverished persons, particularly children, are furnished with Christmas cheer during the Yuletide season. Headquarters for the campaign will be the mission house at 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Leaders' Statements

(Associated Press.)

The Democratic and Republican House Speakership nominees had the following to say on the eve of the convening of the Seventy-second Congress.

JOHN N. GARNER.

Representative Garner, of Texas: "The Democrats will present a harmonious organization, never before equalled in the party's history. With our unity and majority, we expect to capture the House. The entire membership is unanimous. With our unanimity we have found strength and from our strength will come construction."

BERTRAND H. SNELL

Representative Snell, of New York: "The Republicans expect that the major legislation of the present Congress, outside of the regular appropriation bills, will deal largely with the economic problems that are so vital to our people at the present time. We expect to present a strong constructive program that will receive the commendation of the American people."

CAPITAL CIVIC FUND MEETING IS TODAY

Reports Will Be Presented on Charity Work of Agencies.

The annual meeting of the National Capital Civic Fund will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the board room of the District Building. At this meeting, which is open to all persons interested in the operation of this fund, for the benefit of the residents of the District of Columbia, reports for the past year will be presented detailing the operation of the fund, and the agencies participating in, and asissted by the fund.

Recreational educational and civic activities, aided by this fund, include a public athletic program, the D. C. Model Aircraft League, community drama in many phases, the Community Institute, the Summer Sylvan Theater festivals, Fourth of July celebration, and the National Community Christmas tree. The operation of the National Capital Civic Fund makes public solicitation for many of these activities unnecessary, since last year, when the fund was started.

Among those attending will be the incorporators and the designators of the fund, and members of all boards and executive committees of the various agencies assisted by the fund.

E. C. Graham is president of the National Capital Civic Fund. The vice presidents are William Montgomery and E. J. Murphy; secretary, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith; treasurer, Maj. Julius Peyser. Other trustees include E. F. Colladay, Frederic A. Delano, Joshua Evans, jr., Robert V. Fleming, Frank R. Jelleff and Newbold Noyes.

Play Tournament Registration Opens

Drama Contest to Be Started in March; Leaders Are Busy With Plans.

The annual District one-act play tournament, which has been conducted by the Community Center department for the past five years, in cooperation with the Community Drama Guild, will take place this year in March, in order not to interfere with the opening ceremonies of the bicentennial celebration which will occupy the latter part of February.

The preliminaries to the tournament will begin March 1, and will probably continue three nights a week for two weeks. The finals will follow closely thereafter. All drama groups and clubs in the District are invited to participate, but only the first 224 entrants can be accepted, owing to the limitations of time and the necessity of keeping the preliminaries within the two-week period.

Groups are advised that registration will begin at once, and that all entrants must be registered by February 1. The groups this year are asked to present plays of the American colonial or Revolutionary period; and for the finals, two serious plays and two lighter plays of that period will be chosen by the judges, who will be outstanding critics and authorities of the drama in the Capital City.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC REDUCES SALARIES

Will Seek 10 Per Cent Cut Also in Wages Fixed Under U. S. Law.

New York, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A reduction of 10 per cent in the salaries of all officers and employes of the Southern Pacific Railway Co., excepting those under contract or group wage agreements, has been ordered to take effect January 1, according to an announcment made at the offices of the executive committee of the company in New York today.

The announcement adds that negotiations for similar reductions are in progress or will be initiated with the unions whose members are employed under contractual agreements governed by the railway labor act. Similar reductions for employes on the company's lines in Mexico, it is stated, are also under active consideration through the procedure provided by the laws of that country.

Third Large Road to Cut.

The Southern Pacific is the third large railway system to announce its intention to reduce salaries and wages of unionized forces. Officials of the New York Central some weeks ago stated negotiations were being started to cut the road's pay roll 10 per cent. Recently the Chicago & Northwestern requested a 15 per cent cut all along the line.

The action of the Southern Pacific precedes by one day the beginning of a meeting in Chicago of leaders of the railway brotherhoods at which a vote is expected on involuntary wage reductions. The session of the union officials is expected to last three days. Tomorrow and Tuesday preliminary group meetings are scheduled and a final decision may be reached Wednesday, when there will be a general meeting of 1,500 chairmen of all the rail unions.

Ultimatum by Roads.

Hope that the unions will take cognizance of the predicament of the roads and voluntarily accept temporary wage cut was expressed at a recent meeting of the Eastern railway presidents' conference, which deferred any action on the wage question until after the Chicago meeting. At the same time the railway officials issued a virtual ultimatum to the effect that if the Chicago meeting did not take favorable action, proceedings would be immediately started to abrogate the various contracts with the unions and throw the entire wage matter into the hands of a board of mediation.

According to the Federal transportation act the railways can cancel their contracts with the brotherhoods on 30 days' notice. Thereafter both sides can present their cases to an arbitration board consisting of three members. The decision of this board, when reviewed and approved by the courts, must be accepted.

2 Blind Men to Sit In Senate Chamber

Schall, of Minnesota, and Gore, of Oklahoma, on Opposite Sides.

(Associated Press.)

For the first time, the Senate will have two blind members when it convenes today—Schall, of Minnesota, and Gore, of Oklahoma.

They will sit on opposite sides of the chamber. Senator Schall is a Republican and Senator Gore a Democrat. Both are veterans in the national legislative halls.

Senator Schall is beginning his second term. He served several terms in the House. Senator Gore is returning to the Senate after a term he ended in 1922.

Each has a special page at his service, although Senator Schall is also attended by a giant police dog as his companion on trips between the Capitol and the Office Building.

Gov. Ritchie in Chicago; Is Silent on Economics

Chicago, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, arriving in Chicago today with a party of twenty persons, said he was proud to be considered a possible Democratic presidential nominee, but reserved discussion of business conditions until his address before the Illinois Manufacturers Association tomorrow night.

Democratic leaders, including Mayor Anton J. Cermak, National Committeeman Michael J. Igoe, and Judge Ross C. Hall, welcomed the Maryland Governor to the city. He left the railroad station to attend evening church services with an old friend, the Rev. Charles E. McAllister, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Evanston.

Capitol Visited by Hoover On Pleasure Trip in Auto

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover went to the Capitol yesterday—a rare occurrence for him—but once there he didn't go in.

It was a surprise visit which came in the course of an extended tour of inspection of new Federal construction projects, many of which he himself sponsored. Directly after attending services at Friends Church, the President and Mrs. Hoover set out and drove for nearly an hour.

One new construction job after another was visited. Once, the President drove into a street not yet completed. Faced by an impassable "Street Under Construction" sign the entire party, by that time augmented by a Metropolitan police car and two plain clothes men, had to turn around and retrace its course.

Mr. Hoover seemed not to mind, however. The trip was in the nature of a holiday for him, after weeks of steady work he had finished writing his message to Congress and a load was off his shoulders.

The Chief Executive gave no a[dvance] parent notice to the extra precautions to guard him. He has received many demands from the unemployed demonstrators who converged upon Washington yesterday. Not only did Metropolitan police and an automobile loaded with Secret Service men follow him closely, but more than a score of extra policemen surrounded the White House.

The party first drove toward Capitol Hill for a quick look at the improvements in progress on the broad plaza beside the Senate Office Building. Then it crossed the Capitol Grounds to the nearly completed House Office Building addition.

Next, the President took a look at the new Botanic Conservatory, rising near the foot of Capitol Hill, and directed his chauffeur to drive slowly along Constitution avenue, marked with huge excavations from which new Government buildings will rise.

After passing the new Commerce Department Building, in which the President takes particular pride, and the new bridge across the Potomac River near the Lincoln Memorial, the party rode for miles along the river, [and] the thronged municipal golf [and] tennis courts, before returning to the White House.

LAW AND ORDER CHALLENGED.

Several hundred so-called "hunger marchers," who are neither hungry nor marching, are now in Washington, intent upon making a demonstration in behalf of the cause of Communism. They are led by cunning Communists who are skilled in inciting public disorders. These disorders are to be pictured to the dupes of Communism as proof of the brutality of the police, acting under orders of heartless "capitalists" and their tools, the public authorities.

Some of the authorities cherish the notion that they can outwit the Communists by treating them kindly, even to the extent of permitting them to violate minor rules for the preservation of public order. These officials would feed the Communists and their dupes, and provide them with housing at public expense, in the hope that the reds would thereby be induced to refrain from stirring up riots.

It is a foolish and deadly mistake to coddle the Communists in the hope of turning them from their purpose. Public officials have no right to barter away public safety and public order. Every man in uniform is in duty bound to maintain public order at any cost—to crush violence with the sledge hammer of the law, not in belated or wavering fashion, but instantly, on the spot, wherever any hand is raised against the public peace.

If public authorities truckle to these Communist agitators the cause of Communism will gain courage and strength by the apparent proof that the law is cowardly. The skilled propagandists of Communism will make the most of every concession, as evidence that the Government itself is timid and beginning to crumble. On the other hand, the red propagandists will proclaim that every blow struck by the police is a fiendishly brutal assault upon defenseless and starving men and women.

Since the essence of this "hunger march" is enmity of the United States Government and all institutions for its preservation, and since the leaders of these agitators are determined to make it appear that the forces of law and order are themselves brutal violators of human rights, the only safe and honorable course for the guardians of the law to adopt is to avoid all parleys with the disturbers, and enforce the law.

At the moment when organized violence raises its hand, the law should smite. If this test is to be made under the very dome of the Capitol, there is added reason why there must be no doubt of the supremacy of law. If necessary it should be asserted with such force and finality that Communism, from here to Moscow, will never again dare to challenge the Government of the United States.

HIGH COST OF HOMES.

One of the chief objectives of President Hoover's Conference on Home Building and Home Ownership is to relieve the pressure that present conditions have placed upon individuals who are buying homes. The committee agrees that "every American family which so desires and is financially able should own its own home." But progress toward this ideal can not be facilitated by the stimulation of home building before the population is ready to acquire new and better houses.

A note of caution runs through the advice of the home finance committee. Home ownership should not be undertaken, it says, unless the purchasing family is able to pay 25 per cent of the price when the house is occupied and approximately the same percentage of its annual income for maintenance and reduction of the mortgage. Many home owners are in distressful circumstances today because they overreached their incomes. Nothing could be gained by inducing others to do likewise in the hope of reviving the home-building industry.

Because of this unusual situation the conference is hardly in a position to develop a broad policy for the future. One phase of the general housing program that seems to have been neglected is cheaper methods of building. Alfred K. Stern, director of the Rosenwald Foundation, presented an extensive report on the advantages of large-scale home construction, but emergency problems have overshadowed this study. When the next conference meets it may find mass production of homes the most important subject on its agenda.

Home ownership has become more difficult in large cities during recent decades in spite of the rising standards of living. The high cost of urban and suburban homes can not be traced entirely to rising real estate values. Economies in the methods of home construction have not kept pace with development in other industries. Enterprising builders have demonstrated that houses can be manufactured in central plants and assembled for a fraction of the cost of individual construction. With nearly half of the people unable to buy homes because of excessive costs, this industry should be in line for remarkable development. The most certain and effective way of increasing home ownership is by reducing the initial cost of homes within the means of workingmen and low-salaried employes.

FINANCING THE DISTRICT.

Washington's welcome to its city council is accompanied by grave misgivings. The District does not expect much from this session because of the pressing national affairs and the prospects of frequent political aberrations. But the question of District finances is certain to be raised because of the fiscal relations committee's report, which is due this week.

The investigation conducted by this committee has already given ample cause for apprehension. Apparently its members are imbued with the thought that the people of Washington are not paying enough taxes. They have manifest leanings toward the income tax, the inheritance tax and other means of raising more revenue. It is strange that the committee should be so concerned about taxes before it had decided the primary question for which it was organized—the proper fiscal relationship between the District and the Federal Government.

Evidence that the committee attacked its problem from the wrong end may be seen in the fact that it did not meet until last week to decide what is a fair contribution from the Government for maintenance of the Federal City. It seems to be the attitude on Capitol Hill that residents of the District should pay as much in taxes as do residents of other cities, regardless of other factors involved. This is not logic, nor reason, but politics. Congressmen love to return to their home districts and tell how they have "soaked" the voteless Capital with taxes. Such an attitude makes a farce of every gesture that is made to adjust the costs of maintaining Washington on an equitable basis.

The comparison of taxes and expenditures of the District with those of other localities is extremely misleading. The taxpayers of Washington support, not a municipality, but a National Capital. The parks and streets, the police and fire protection and every other municipal responsibility is augmented by reason of the fact that this city is the seat of government. No amount of argument as to how high taxes are elsewhere can alter the obligation of the Government to share on a pro rata basis the cost of maintaining the District.

Other cities indulge in the luxuries of self-government and politics. Those blessings are denied to Washington, but the politicians who visit here once each year are inclined to think that the people should pay for corruption and inefficiency nevertheless. If politics could be left out of the picture the situation would resolve itself into elemental simplicity. The committee could determine how much is needed to maintain the District in a manner befitting its national dignity. Then it could determine what portion of that expense results from the fact that Washington is the Federal City. The remainder would be a logical charge against taxpayers.

Past experience gives no occasion to hope for such an approach to the subject in the fiscal relations committee's report. Yet if the committee ignores this fundamental relationship between the Capital and the Government, its report will represent so much wasted effort.

DR. SMITH'S CASE.

Justice Peyton Gordon, of the District Supreme Court, has ruled that the Senate has no authority to recall the confirmation of a presidential appointee after it has once notified the President of its approval. Thus comes to a close the fiasco in which the coalition of insurgents and Democrats tried to oust George Otis Smith as chairman of the Federal Power Commission because he dismissed two subordinates against the wishes of coalition leaders.

The Senate confirmed the nomination of Dr. Smith and by unanimous order notified the President of its action. The appointment was then duly completed. Dr. Smith took the oath of office and began the performance of his official duties, along with other members of the commission. The dismissal of two power commission employes who had figured prominently in the factional rows of the old commission aroused the ire of certain senators and they induced the Senate to ask President Hoover to return Dr. Smith's name for reconsideration. When Mr. Hoover refused the Senate ran amuck. But its attempt to reverse its decision and to usurp executive authority over the commission have proved quite futile.

The logic of Justice Gordon's opinion is clear and impressive. "It would be illogical," he said, "to construe the Senate communication to the President as merely a message of encouragement, and to advise him of the fact that there actually had been a test vote and that a clear majority favored confirmation. When the Senate, in conformity with its own rules, unanimously ordered notice of consent to be forwarded to the President, it once for all surrendered its control of the matter, and despite the reconsideration, left the executive free to make the constitutional appointment."

The Senate can reconsider its action in confirming a nomination, but common sense dictates that it shall not advise the President of confirmation and then attempt to exercise the right to reconsider. The Senate in trying to unseat Dr. Smith is foolishly emphasizing the blunder it made when it tried to recover jurisdiction over a matter after it had formally relinquished its jurisdiction.

HUNGER MARCHES

By JAMES WALDO FAWCETT.

The present "hunger march" on the Nation's Capital furnishes an interesting example of the tendency of history to repeat itself. There have been many such incidents in the annals of European countries and several in those of the United States.

In England in 1381, following Parliament's institution of the poll tax, the peasants rose at Brentwood in Essex and at Dartford, and began a march on London. At Rochester they seized the castle. Proceeding up the Medway to Maidstone, where they chose for their leader one Wat Tyler, a veteran of the French War. Tyler was a born commander and something of a statesman withal. But any moderating influence he may have had upon his followers was futile to protect them after they had taken Canterbury, sacked the palace of Archbishop Sudbury, the chancellor, and beheaded three citizens as "traitors."

The mob reached Blackheath on June 11, burnt the prisons at Southwark and pillaged the archbishop's palace at Lambeth. King Richard II was lodging at the Tower, but neither the soverign nor his councilors had thus far taken any steps to protect London. The drawbridge of London Bridge having been lowered by treachery, Tyler crossed the Thames and occupied the city. John of Gaunt's splendid mansion on Savoy Hill was sacked and burnt. The official residence of Sir Robert Hales, the royal treasurer, fared likewise. The prisoners in Newgate and the fleet were released.

The London mob received the rebels with enthusiasm. For three days the riot continued. Then, on June 14, the king, a boy of 15 at the time, rode out to meet Tyler in conference. They met at Mile End. Tyler demanded the immediate abolition of serfdom and all feudal services, the removal of all restrictions on labor and trade, and a general amnesty for the insurgents. Charters were drawn up to give effect to these demands. The king indicated that he would approve them.

But Tyler's mob went too far. At the moment of seeming victory, they damaged their cause beyond repair. They executed Sudbury and Hales on Tower Hill. During the following night and day London was given over to slaughter and pillage. But even as the disorder proceeded the power to successfully oppose it was being organized. The propertied classes banded together for the restoration of order. The king had agreed to meet Tyler at Smithfield on June 15. When he arrived there, he was confronted by Tyler with a new series of demands. The confiscation of ecclesiastical estates and the institution of social equality were among these requirements. The king replied that the popular desire should be satisfied "saving the regalities of the crown." But at the moment of the monarch's concession an altercation occurred, and Tyler was stabbed to death by Sir William Walworth, the lord mayor, and John Standwick, one of the king's squires. The revolt collapsed. Parliament revoked the king's grants, and there were no permanent results beneficial to the peasants in consequence of the rising.

In 1450 there was another rebellion in England. This time the leader was one Jack Cade, a gentleman of some substance and standing. His followers were Kentish farmers and laborers. At one time they numbered 40,000. They marched from Ashford to Blackheath, retreated, defeated the royal forces at Sevenoaks (June 18) and returned victoriously to London, entering the city on July 3. The town was favorable to Cade's complaint of maladministration, waste, corruption and oppression, and also to his indictment of the statute of laborers.

But when Cade executed Lord Say-and-Sele and William Crowmer, sheriff of Kent, and attempted to exact forced contributions from the wealthy classes, the gates of the city were closed against him on the withdrawal of his army to Southwark. However, the government offered concessions and pardons, and these being accepted many of the rebels returned to their homes. Cade himself received a formal pardon, but this was later revoked, and the new sheriff of Kent, one Alexander Iden, hunted down his little band of personal followers and killed them all near Heathfield. The chronicle of the rising terminated with the death of the leader, July 13.

In France, the great revolution began with the arrival in Paris during July, 1789, of thousands of "hunger pilgrims" from the provincial towns. They had marched to the capital to demand bread of the king. It was these riotous elements which joined with the city mob to take the Bastille on July 14. By October the swollen population of the metropolitan area was starving. The municipality endeavored to supply bread to the more necessitous people, but the demand was too great to be met in this way. On October 5 a delegation of women set out for Versailles to petition Louis XVI. As they marched they were joined by multitudes of other women. Arriving at their goal they increased their originally mild demands.

The "insurrection of women" was promptly followed by a similar march to Versailles of the men of Paris led by the national guard. The arrival of La Fayette saved the royal family for the moment, but the king was forced to return to Paris, accompanied by the mob. On January 21, 1793, he was executed. The French Revolution was "a marching revolution" from first to last, and in the end Napoleon Bonaparte was directing the marches.

In America, the most celebrated "hunger march" was that commanded by Jacob S. Coxey in 1894. He led his famous "army" to Washington in 1894 to demand that the Government should put the unemployed manhood of the country to work building roads.

POST HASTE.

Since the Congress that convenes today is the Seventy-second, it is obvious that the Nation has survived seventy-one.

Our solons, numbering 531, will congregate on Capitol Hill, differing in party ties, but all fired with the conviction that "nothing is law that is not reason."

It is gratifying that Democrats in the House decided to lay on McDuffie the responsibility of wielding the party whip.

The Senate will be called upon to deny passage to lots of things besides hunger marchers this winter.

Cleveland's name didn't sound just right for raising a Republican convention fund, anyhow.

Congressmen may feel they are important today, but the grand slam for many thousands will be the opening of the Culbertson-Lenz bridge contest.

The Basel investigators will find that while Germany has used only half of the money she has borrowed to pay war debts, the rest is well anchored in permanent improvements.

If a national credit organization will start industry, let's have it. Industrial activity is the one thing that automatically will solve all the other troubles.

Japan has displayed youthful sophistication in toying with the League of Nations. It has taken the dowager nations a long time to realize how thoroughly they have been bamboozled by Oriental naivete.

The Chinese announcement that they will not evacuate Chincow will doubtless be considered such an affront by the Japanese army that it will soon be obliged to hunt bandits in that vicinity.

Herr Hitler renounces any claim to the presidency of Germany. He just wants to be the power behind the overthrown.

Having shaken hands with all the Southern congressmen on their way North the Governor of New York is returning from Georgia. The Mayor of New York is also expected to take a look at the metropolis soon.

We now venture the prediction without reservation or exception that today Mr. Garner will be elected Speaker of the House.

FEAR.

The great god Fear grinned back at me:
"I am the foe men never see,
The hurt they never feel," said he.

"I am the wrong they never bear,
The poison they themselves prepare.
I am the shadow on the stair.

"I have no voice and yet I speak;
No strength and yet I blanch the cheek
And leave the strongest mortals weak.

"I am the blackguard man befriends.
Heeds most, feeds, cherishes, attends
And 'gainst all counsel wise defends.

"I fire no gun, I make no cry,
No lodging place in fact have I,
Yet I'm the countless deaths men die.

"Mine is humor ghastly, grim,
The lamp of reason I can dim,
Though I am nothing but a whim.

"I am man's cruelest, bitterest foe,
Yet past his door I could not go,
Had he the wit to tell me: 'No'."

Any Land Must Fare Ill While Two Rogues Can Outvote the Wisest of Men.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

In the sea and in the jungle, the creatures that dominate are the ones best equipped by nature to conquer and to survive.

The form of government instituted by nature is an aristocracy—literally, the rule of the best. It is the logical and reasonable way, and therefore the one that must ultimately survive.

There are three kinds of aristocracy, but only one is reasonable and genuine.

The aristocracy of birth can not endure, for it is based on the false assumption that genius will reproduce itself.

In the beginning it was a true aristocracy, for its founders were superior men who fought their way to leadership. And it might have remained true if law or custom had required superior men to find superior mates. But so long as the choice of mates is left to individual fancy, the advantage held by one generation will be lost by the next. The aristocracy of birth has no claim to power except the superiority of ancestors from whom it degenerated. Any normal child from the slums, given equal training, might equal its finest specimens.

The aristocracy of money is equally unsound, for it is based on an assumption equally false. In a world where money is the goal of every man's striving, the assumption is that possession of money affords proof of superiority. But fools inherit money, the fortunate find it and knaves steal it. Great wealth is possessed by men who are superior only in their ability to evade the law, while men truly great die poor because their lives were devoted to unselfish service.

The one aristocracy based on reason and justice is that of achievement.

Napoleon founded one, but promptly prostituted it to win the support of mediocre men necessary to his schemes of empire. His legion of honor now includes men who qualify only as a legion.

But the idea is sound. The rule of the superior is right. The glory of Greece was the genius of a few men surrounded by nonentities and half-breed slaves. The national history of any generation is the biography of a superior man.

The best governed of small nations gives an extra vote to university graduates. Is it right that a stupid and shiftless bum should have a voice in government equal to that of an Edison?

Superior men will rule in any case. Why not recognize the truth, and give every man incentive to win power by proving his right to it.

Republican Defeatism.
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

In this off-year election the issue in New Jersey stressed by the Democrats and met by the Republican candidate was President Hoover's administration and its policies. The Democrats capitalized to the full the prevailing depression, as they did in the recent election for governor. This being so, the Republican candidate had every right to expect aggressive support from the national management of his party. It was not forthcoming. The Republican national committee sent two comparatively unknown speakers to New Jersey.

Notwithstanding the critical importance of this election, as bearing both upon the question of House control and that of indorsing President Hoover's administration, Chairman Fess and his associates at national headquarters seemed quite willing to allow it to go by default. Republican national leaders are now reaping the fruits of their dissensions, disorganization and reluctance to grapple with the serious situation confronting the party.

Democrats on Trial.
Baltimore Sun.

In the House, for the first time since 1918 the Democrats are about to come into power. Upon the manner in which this power is exercised, upon the courage which is shown in confronting abuses, upon the foresight in dealing with long-term problems of finance, tariff and taxation will depend in large measure the position of the party at the outset of the next presidential campaign. Narrow partisanship or local selfishness in dealing with the critical matters upon which Congress will have to pass judgment these next six months would go far to wipe out the advantages the Democrats now plainly enjoy.

Millions, Billions.
Minneapolis Journal.

Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, who is advocating a huge Federal bond issue to build high speed motor roads, and also an enormous currency inflation to refinance mortgage loans, got his start when the Non-partisan League elected him governor of North Dakota in 1916.

The Fargo Forum recalls that when Mr. Frazier became governor, North Dakota had a bonded indebtedness of $462,000, with $250,000 in a sinking fund for its retirement. The Frazier administration inaugurated the "New Day," with its ambitious industrial progress for North Dakota. As a result that State has a bonded debt today of more than $40,000,000. Tax levies made necessary to pay deficits and bond interest on account of that same program have totaled nearly $7,000,000, with no end in sight.

With the whole United States as his territory, Senator Frazier now has outgrown his modest North Dakota ideas, and has mounted from millions to billions. The experience of his own State, however, does not commend a Frazier economic program to the Nation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Says Punctuation Is the Ruling Factor in Determining Whether It Is Proper to Use "Have" or "Has."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We now have two schools of grammatical construction—the operative and speculative. This condition has been made apparent within the last few days in the discussion of a certain sentence recently appearing in one of our national magazines. The sentence is as follows: "It seems evident that the Mussolini ambition, or rather its latest ramifications, have a depressing effect." The bone of contention is the verb "have."

To the analytical mind either "have" or "has" may be correct, but it depends upon how the sentence is punctuated. As it now stands "have" is incorrect. "Ambition" is the subject and the verb must conform. The word "ramifications" is merely an explanatory adjective. Mussolini's ambition is a unit containing two or more fractional parts denominated "ramifications." Therefore, the phrase containing the word "ramifications" could be left out and the sentence still convey the meaning of the author.

On the other hand, leaving the words as they stand but shifting the commas, the word "have" is correct: "It, seems evident that the Mussolini ambition, or, rather, its ramifications have a depressing effect." It shifts the responsibility of the depression from Mussolini's ambition to the ramifications that make up his ambition.

Composition is a lost art. It has been sacrificed on the altar of "speed." The linotype machine and the efficiency expert have proved demoralizing factors. While opinion is divided in this instance, the guilty publication admits the error and shifts the blame upon the proofreader. The reader perhaps is efficient, but let the word "stand" to save a line. The foreman probably demanded quantity at the expense of quality. Too little regard is given our English. When an outstanding football hero of one of our foremost colleges refers to "them days" it appears that the wrong end is being educated, and something should be "did" about it.

Squabble Over Booze the Last Thing Desired by Average Citizen—Let Congress Stick to Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think it would be a very good thing if the idea of your editorial, "Wrangling Over Liquor," could be conveyed to every citizen of the country. It would be a blessing if it found expression in every newspaper of the country. Here we are faced by a most serious home problem of taxation in addition to a dangerous international state of affairs, and yet so-called statesmen are engaged in a disgraceful booze-or-no-booze squabble which they threaten to carry over into the coming Congress session. Should they sidetrack or neglect legislation necessary just now to tone up the body-politic it will be set down in history as nothing less than a calamity. But perhaps it may be possible that the situation is not quite so bad as it looks. It may be that the sentiment of plain, calm thinking citizens is only for the time being drowned out by the wrangling over rum and that there will be clear-headed leaders to call a halt on the fanatics and marplots when Congress meets. At least as a God-fearing old timer I hope so. The spectacle of a barroom brawl in the halls of legislation this winter might well make patriots weep.

STEADY READER.

Crude Sentence Evokes Half-Baked Verdicts From Educators—Needed Editing, That's All.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It does not speak well for the cultural equipment of conspicuous educators of the country that so many of them consider the plural form of the verb "to have" correct in the sentence:

"It seems evident that the Mussolini ambition, or rather its latest ramifications, have a depressing effect."

Evidently such "educators" are misled by the plural sound of a crude arrangement of words in the sentence under consideration. In the same way many half-educated persons pluralize such nouns as "economics" and "politics."

It is a pity that one should be under the necessity of insisting that Lexicographer Vizetelly's statement is conclusive: "The syntax of the sentence is faulty, but as submitted, 'has' is correct. The phrase 'or rather its latest ramifications' is parenthetical."

Any high school boy or girl will understand this when the syntax of the sentence is readjusted as follows:

"It seems evident that (in its latest ramifications) the Mussolini ambition has a depressing effect."

PROOFREADER.

Writer Justifies Use of "Have" for "Has" on Ground That It Is Radio Grammar.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to settle the controversy in The Post yesterday morning over "has" and "have."

"It seems evident that the Mussolini ambition, or rather its latest ramifications, have a depressing effect." This is what is known in radio grammar as a "Graham McNames" sentence. Graham would say, in reporting a tackle, "Johnnie Jones—or rather Bobbie Gray and Eddie Brown have thrown him for a loss." The sentence of which "ambition" was to be the subject was not completed to the predicate. The substituted, not the discarded, subject controls the number of the verb. The phrase set off by commas, which contains the real subject, is not parenthetical, although given that form by an error in punctuation. The evident meaning must overrule the punctuation.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

WHEN criticism began to be heard about loading down programs too heavily with advertising we suggested to Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, that radio advertisers and program sponsors be called to Washington to talk the situation over and if possible correct it. Gen. Saltzman agreed with this and declared that such a conference ought to be held.

Then we spoke to several prominent radio advertisers suggesting that they meet the general halfway. They too expressed their approval but that was as far as it ever got.

It is very trite to say, "we told you so," but at that time—just a year ago—we predicted that if the commission or the advertisers didn't do something to curb too lengthy advertising in radio programs they might find themselves in the unfortunate position of being scrutinized, if not regulated, by Congress.

This prediction came to pass, in part yesterday, when Representative Ewin L. Davis, fighting Democrat of Tennessee, prospective chairman of the committee in the House having to do with radio, by way of whetting his knife for the coming session declared the Federal Radio Commission had fallen down on its job in its failure to eliminate excessive advertising.

Furthermore Judge Davis announced that he proposed to do something about it.

JUST what it may be is a matter of conjecture, but let me say, after long acquaintance with Judge Davis, if he gets properly riled up on the subject, the Radio Commission and the advertisers having apparently overlooked the opportunity to clean their own house, had better hit for the cyclone cellars.

Nor are they apt to get much sympathy from Senator Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, who is in charge of radio matters in the Senate. It will not be a partisan affair, as both Senators Dill, of Washington, and White, of Maine, the former a Democrat and the latter a Republican, have expressed themselves in favor of some sort of curb on radio advertising. What they have to say carries considerable weight, because they are the authors of the radio act.

Senator Dill, like Representative Davis, said that radio advertising should be regulated by the commission.

"The mere fact that the law prohibits censorship does not mean that the commission can not take into consideration the nature of programs from the standpoint of public interest," Senator Dill told this writer.

"If the commission does not succeed in impressing it upon the broadcasters that too much advertising is not in the public interest, it then may be necessary for Congress to act."

FOUR years ago when broadcasters wanted anything in radio they would get into touch with W. D. Terrell, chief radio supervisor. Mostly this was done by letter but sometimes the applicant would go to Washington. Mr. Terrell would then speak to Judge S. B. Davis, solicitor general of the Commerce Department. If it was very important, the judge and Terrell would take it up with Secretary Hoover.

Those three, with the assistance of W. E. Downey, a few field inspectors and clerks, without even a radio law to back them up, handled the situation to the evident satisfaction of the broadcasters.

According to a report released for this morning, the Federal Radio Commission now employs 132 persons for this same work and was operated last year at a cost of almost a half million dollars, of which $328,978 was paid out in salaries alone.

Thus radio control finds itself a thriving political plum tree which grows sturdier and sturdier as time goes on.

THE reason why the five-year old set at home sounds as well to many as the one just off the production line in the up-to-date factory is purely a matter of psychology, says Ray H. Manson, chief engineer of the Stromberg-Carlson Co. In the course of years the owner's ear becomes so accustomed to the inferior reproduction of his old-type receiver that his sensibilities are dulled to the more effective reproduction of an up-to-date set.

Mr. Manson suggests that a person who really believes that his antique receiver gives better tone quality than the new type give a new 1932 type set a thorough test of two or three days. Oftentimes a prospective radio buyer will listen to one set after another, spending no more than 15 or 20 minutes on each one. In this short time his ear is not able to adjust itself to any one receiver. However, if he will listen to a set whose reproduction is noted for its naturalness and give his ear a chance to overcome its predilections in favor of his old model, he can appreciate the vast superiority of the modern set. The reproduction of the old set will no longer sound pleasing to him.

Jane Claire INTERPRETS the MODE

Tucking and a subtle cut of skirt are responsible for the elegance of this raspberry-purple crepe frock. (Sketched in Fifth Avenue Shop.)

New York, Dec. 6.

I'LL tell you about the coat and dress, and their relation to each other. Ensemble doesn't mean what it uster be, oh no! But ensemble still means what it originally meant in the French language.

But the ensemble, as we have thought of it all these years, has changed many times and ways. Today, this winter I mean, the ensemble consists of a dress and coat, or dress and jacket, which, while seeming to belong to one another, can be and are supposed to be worn apart as single and complete garments—the dress with a fur or scarf, the coat as a coat, with several other dresses. If you will recall the ensemble of some years ago, you will remember that this could not have been done with that type of an ensemble.

Today the ensemble doesn't have to match in either cut, fabric or color, yet somehow, it just is an ensemble. Of course, the shades of the colors often blend, and the cut usually harmonizes—that is, the coat won't be cut on circular lines, with circular incrustations and everything, and the dress straight lines, broad shoulders and box pleats! Shades of red, for instance, or brown and beige, or navy and a medium blue, will be seen in an ensemble. And if the shoulders of the coat are square and broad, the dress will be cut on straight and square lines.

Other than that, there is no longer anything "ensemble" about an ensemble. Today's ensemble is just another way to be well dressed, tastefully dressed, harmoniously dressed. Therefore, shall we end by saying that the ensemble had a part to play in the sartorial scheme, and has played it to the finish with the utmost success?

* * * *

I selected the dress to illustrate today because it is one of the dresses I mentioned above—a frock that stands alone as a very elegant dress, yet is harmonized with a coat, which I am sketching for you tomorrow. The tucks give this dress its elegance, and the skirt cut is interesting. For all-around practicability, the material is heavy crepe, and the color raspberry purple—you know the shade?

In case you don't, it's a reddish, rich purple, fluttering just because it is reddish.

* * * *

Now, for the most gorilicious all-in-one combination undie you can imagine! It's form fitting, the bust is cup-shaped, there is an ingenuous arrangement in front to lower the decolletage, and an even more interesting one in back with adjustable shoulder straps, that makes the garment suitable for even the lowest evening gown. And, the whole thing only takes three quarters of a yard of material!!! Better send that stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post right away, before you forget it—for you can make this delightful and practical garment your very own self, from the illustrated leaflet telling you how to go about it.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

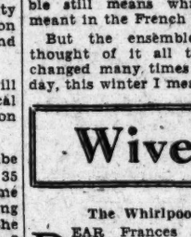
REFUSING FINESSES.

A FINESSE, as most Contract players know, is an effort to win a trick through the positional location of honors. If the success of a contract depends upon the taking of a finesse, and if no way can be found to avoid it, the finesse, of course should be taken. Every reasonable chance should be taken to assure the making of your contract, as that is the primary purpose of the game of Contract Bridge. While this is true, a Bridge player makes a serious mistake when he develops a finessing complex and takes finesses unnecessarily to the accomplishment of the desired end. When all that a finesse will gain is an extra immaterial trick, and when, if it fails, you stand to lose your contract, a person who will take a finesse can not expect to occupy a place among the experts of his community. In other words, you should school yourself so that you can take your finesses or leave them alone. Do not become a finesse addict as this is one of the most fatal diseases with certain types of Bridge players. Read the story in today's hand and if you feel any symptoms of the disease see a good Contract doctor at once.

South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.
East and West 40.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	2♣	2♡	2♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Against this game going contract, South opened the four of hearts. This East could not clearly read as a Singleton as there is one small card in the suit missing, but had he stopped to count his tricks he would have seen how unwise it was to take risks. However, loving finesses, he played a small heart from the Dummy and North won with the King. North was under no misapprehension as to his partner's heart holding and returned it at once. South trumping with the three. South then led the Ace of diamonds and continued the suit. North trumping the second round with the nine of spades and leading another heart. South again trumped and led the third round of diamonds which North trumped to lead another heart and thus allowed South to utilize his last trump on that suit. South then cashed the Ace of clubs and North and South called it a day, having won five spade tricks, one heart, one diamond and one club, thus defeating the contract 3 tricks.

The other picture is quickly painted. Had East refused to finesse the hearts, he would have made his contract. The lead of the heart four was a danger signal which East should have regarded not only because of the danger of the cross ruff, but because he can see his contract is probable, in fact almost certain, if he refuses not only the heart finesse but the spade finesse as well. The Ace of hearts should be played to the first trick and the spade led from Dummy and the finesse again refused, as when North plays the nine of spades it is apparent that he has either no more or both King and Queen, or the King or Queen alone. If he has no more, the finesse can not be of any benefit. If he holds either honor singly guarded, the finesse, while ordinarily gaining a trick, would be, in this instance, atrocious play as in that case the trumps would break so that by laying down the Ace, North and South would win only 2 trump tricks. They will thus win 2 trump tricks, 1 heart, 1 diamond and 1 club and East would make his contract of two spades, a just reward for refusing to take foolish and unnecessary chances.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: What is needed to raise one in a suit to two in a suit?

Answer: Inasmuch as partner's Opening bid has shown about 4 tricks, the Responding Hand, having adequate trump support, can raise once, holding 4 supporting tricks. (4 plus 4 equals 8.) In case of intervening bid, this requirement may be shaded.

FRANCES M'DONALD

The Whirlpool of Life.

DEAR Frances McDonald: Can you give me any sort of comforting thought to sustain me in circumstances that suggest nothing less than a curse following me?

Here are a few of the things that have occurred so far. My mother disappeared when I was 12, and father, feeling he was to blame for whatever fate befell her, took his own life. I did not know of this for many years, believing what grandmother told me, that he just died. Then my brother who did know ran away and we have never heard from him in eight years. Never a cold night but I picture him somewhere in misery. I go almost crazy, for he had no schooling, was not strong; how could he make a living, a boy of 15? I went to business school. Finished with honors. Was a trusted employe in a splendid firm who were like my own people to me. One day I came to work and was met by two detectives. A sum of money had disappeared. It was never discovered who took it and I was coldly asked to resign. This at 22. It nearly killed me. I can not imagine who took that money. Only the three men of the firm and I could get it. It was $1,200. I was too crushed for months to even think. Then sheer want forced me to come to life. I came here and went to work. The man was wonderful and had a great future, but he was in debt. I worked like a slave doing two people's work. My reward was that his wife wrote the company denouncing us both, and once more I met undeserved disgrace. This was the one time I was weak. In the weeks that followed I for the first time turned to liquor. I wanted to forget my utter humiliation and despair. Very foolishly it seemed to me, the man left his firm, sold his share to the others in his disgust at his wife's act and their treatment of me. He is now down and out. Meanwhile I have watched a sister die with tuberculosis, and am helping her little 16-year-old daughter to conceal unmarried motherhood. And how I can stand anything more I do not know. I am 30. I have loved the man who wants to marry me for six years. He knows everything, says my niece and her baby can live with us. But I have a feeling that more misery lies ahead, in fact that I bring people trouble. I know all the men in the first firm I was with now distrust and suspect each other, even though they at first suspected me. And look at this other man who was nothing to me, yet ruined because of the hoodoo that follows me. I am afraid of my life that something terrible will happen to the man I love if I marry him. Am I losing my mind?

DISTRACTED SOUL.

No, you are not losing your mind, just your sense of proportion.

Marry your man. Adopt that baby. Be a mother to the frantic child who so needs a mother now. And believe me when I tell you that your brother is probably a happy-go-lucky garage mechanic in some far away town, perfectly content with his lot, and losing no sleep over the fact that he finished school at 15. Get married for goodness sake.

MOSLEM DELEGATE CLUBBED AT PARLEY

him ran and stood over him with outstretched arms to protect him until police arrived and carried him away.

"Better that the Islamic world be obliterated than that this jewel fall into the hands of the enemies," an Irak delegate later cried, referring to the mosque with its dome illuminated by floodlights and its interior profusely lighted by lamps and candelabra.

Egyptian delegates declared at the opening of the conference that they would leave Jerusalem if the two rival sections of Palestine Moslems did not make peace among themselves. Wafdists have proposed that the Congress should be held in Cairo.

Jerusalem, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—A glamorous and long-suppressed dream of Pan-Islam, with the caliph raised again to spiritual and perhaps temporal power in the East, will be revived unofficially tomorrow at the Pan-Islamic Congress here.

Despite powerful opposition which appears likely to suppress the movement, the Moslem leaders gathering in Jerusalem believe the congress will advance their campaign to restore the caliph as the spiritual head of the world's most widespread religion.

They will meet in the center of Zionism, the world movement for restoration of Palestine as a Jewish National Home. They must defy the probable opposition of Great Britain because of her mandate over Palestine, and they must face the passive opposition of such Moslem leaders as King Feisul, of Irak, the Emir Abdulla, of Transjordania and the grand Iman of Yemen; but they continue to express confidence in the outcome.

Kiwanians to Visit Manassas.

American Exhibition Is Set For District Textile Museum

Portraits of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Mrs. Lee, which are among the paintings to be exhibited in the Textile Museum at 2330 S street on Wednesday and Thursday.

Important Paintings and Other Items Listed; Lees in Portrait.

By ADA RAINEY.

From England in 1641 came Richard Lee and founded a long line of men and women who have helped to make American history. An important exhibition of Americana is being held on Wednesday and Thursday in the District of Columbia Textile Museum, at 2330 S street, as a celebration of the event.

Great interest is being awakened in Colonial revolutionary and early republican portraits, silver and historical things. This activity is directly concerned with the purchase of Stratford, the ancestral home of the Lees.

The chairman of the "District Committee of the Robert E. Lee Foundation" is Mrs. McCook Knox, an expert on paintings, silver and furniture of early American days. She passes on the art treasures and the historical objects which go to make up this important exhibition which interests many of the prominent families of Virginia and Maryland.

Portraits of Lee and Wife.

Chief among the paintings are two portraits of Gen. Robert E. Lee and his wife. Both are valuable and have never been publicly shown before. Photographs have been especially taken of these two portraits for The Post. They were in storage and Mrs. Knox and the present owner of the portraits had them specially photographed. The photographs later will be catalogued for the Frick Art Reference Library in New York.

The Lee portraits are works of art as well as of historical importance. That of Gen. Lee was painted by Robert Weir, well-known painter, who has a large painting in the rotunda of the Capitol. It is an historical painting of the "Embarkation of the Pilgrims." The painter was the father of another important American painter, J. Alden Weir, of New York, who is represented in the Phillips Memorial Gallery and the Corcoran Gallery. He was a brilliant painter of figures and landscape. Lee's portrait was painted by the early Weir, when he was superintendent of West Point. Weir was the teacher of drawing there for many years. The younger Weir inherited the poetical qualities of his father, which can be easily traced in the Lee portrait.

The portrait of Mrs. Lee is charmingly graceful, and shows her with a parrot on her hand.

But the parrot, which is such an attractive element in Mrs. Lee's portrait came there not because she owned a parrot, but because the artist could not paint hands skillfully.

Painted by Frenchmen.

This portrait was painted by Auguste Hervier, a French artist, who came to America and traveled with Mrs. Trollope and did the illustrations for her famous book. But the artist was almost forgotten and no one knew who painted the portrait until his signature was discovered on the canvas by Mrs. Knox, who is an expert on American portraits and is collecting them for the coming bicentennial as well as for the present show.

Then there are other portraits which will be seen this week, taken from unsuspecting corners in Washington houses. Portraits of Robert Carter, son of King Carter, and his wife Priscilla Bladon. These portraits were painted about 1750 and have been attributed to John Wollaston, who also painted the portrait of Martha Washington which at one time graced the Lee Mansion at Arlington. They hung in Nonini Hall, in Virginia, which belonged to Robert Carter, great-granduncle to Robert E. Lee. From the same source comes a silver gravy dish with silver plate underneath, a glass pitcher used for years in the family and a large vegetable dish and platter.

There is a portrait of Dolly Madison, which was painted for her bridesmaid, Elizabeth Collins, afterward Mrs. Richard Bland Lee. It is dated 1817.

But the silver insists on attention. The "clou" of the collection is a silver service with large tea tray, teapot, cream pitcher, tea caddy and sugar bowl which was used at Mount Vernon during the lifetime of Washington. It belonged to Martha Washington when she was Mrs. Custis, then went to the Custis family and then to the Lees.

Unusually Rare Miniatures.

There will be a large number of unusually rare miniatures nearly all of which have a story of brave men and fair women belonging to them. There are miniatures of Mr. and Mrs. William Mac Kaye, of Baltimore. Mr. Mac Kaye was the first president of the first bank of Baltimore and was connected with the Lees through the Carroll family. These miniatures are signed I. B.

Belonging to Alice Lee, sister of Richard Henry Lee, are two lovely miniatures of her two sons by Peale. They are done when the children were very young. One of her daughter, Mrs. Beekman Livingston, knows her as a young matron with delightful ringlets and powdered hair. Rebecca Lloyd, sister of Francis Key Scott, was painted by Richard Causeway, famous English miniaturist. This was painted in 1785. Another miniature, by Francis Burrell, of Mrs. Thomas Shore, makes a rare group. Belonging to the same family is a book of silhouettes which were cut by one of the Peale sisters. All the Peales were gifted artistically and many are the miniatures that they painted, James and his brother and a nephew and two sisters are painted and drew and cut silhouettes. A rare St. Memin, a portrait in crayon of Joseph Hooper Nicholson would add distinction to almost any collection.

rowed $1,550,000,000, then $1,100,000,000 on June 15, and the third $1,500,000,000 on September 15.

While the total quarterly sales will have totaled approximately $5,450,000,000 this calendar year, the greater part of the money was used to refund debts. As a result the increase in outstanding securities has amounted to only $1,000,000,000, of which $500,000,000 was added to the public debt in the last fiscal year.

The Treasury's latest statement for the present fiscal year to December 3 showed that securities of all kinds issued totaled $2,482,421,467. Those retired in the same period amounted to $1,979,426,058.

In March, simultaneously with the inflow of income taxes on 1931 incomes, the Treasury must raise funds to pay off $623,891,500 in Treasury certificates and $100,000,000 in Treasury bills.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

YOU might almost have thought it was New Year's Day, or something, the way callers were popping in and out of the stage doors last Saturday afternoon. Interviewers, friends of the family, fellow artists publicity hounds, business advisers, et cetera, and what have you? All very exciting, and to the patient players making the first "personal appearances" in Washington motion picture theaters, probably a bit irritating and decidedly a bore—even if they wouldn't let even one little speck of their true feelings bob to the surface.

Alice White.

As a matter of fact, the first person I saw after Frank La Falce, of the Warner publicity department, had peeled me off the mezzanine wall, where I was wedged behind what seemed several thousand superfluous cash customers, and at least that many more rabid Alice White fans than the Earle Theater could comfortably or conveniently accommodate, and achieved the uncluttered passageway leading backstage by a wide run around left end, was charming little Mitzi Mayfair, of the Ziegfeld "Follies." Mitzi had been out front during the first performance, and now was trying to locate Miss White's dressing room in order that she might express something of her appreciation of the smooth dancing act presented by the former film star and her partner, Mr. William Moffa, before hurrying to the National to put on her own. So we went in together.

Mitzi was all done up in a trig new coat that Alice thought was so very smart that she wished she had one like it. Ignoring that old Spanish custom that compels one so complimented to present the object of the flattery to the flatterer, Mitzi still wore the coveted garment when she left!

SO FAR, I dare say, this sounds more like the recorded impressions of a visit with Mitzi Mayfair than with the blonde and dynamic Miss White, but that is only for atmosphere, if I know what I mean. I have introduced the surging multitude motif merely to emphasize the very palpable fact that Miss Alice White is a self-contained and agreeably self-complacent young woman who is not flustered by the excitement of a first performance, or the sudden onslaught of admiring hosts and annoying column conductors.

The thing that struck me quickest and most forcibly in meeting this assured and confident young woman was that under any, and apparently all, circumstances, she is charmingly and utterly herself—no artificial swank, no aloofness, no tall millinery; just an exceedingly disarming and likable example of precisely what is meant by "regular."

The luncheon hour having almost slipped by, and no one else seeming to feel the need of sustenance, Miss White diverted herself with a toasted chicken sandwich and a cup of black coffee, while explaining that the services of a competent masseuse are more valuable in evading the encroachments of embonpoint that all the diets and all the exercises ever invented.

Miss White, by the way, tipped the beam at 132 pounds when she made her screen debut as the feminine "menace" with Milton Sills, Mary Astor and Lawrence Gray in "The Sea Tiger." She now fluctuates widely in weight between 98 and 100!

WHILE Alice White is a graceful little wisp of a thing at her present poundage, it still will be her eyes that will rivet your attention—big, dark brown eyes that gaze at you frankly through long and heavily beaded lashes that afford a striking contrast to the more or less tousled mop of blonde hair through which there is still an occasional glint of the Titian shade it was when Miss White graduated from script girl to screen player.

That was a tough order, that first picture, as Miss White recalls it four and a half years after it was made. The scenes of retributive justice in which Miss Astor was supposed to drag Miss White about by the hair of her head in a drenching downpour were almost too realistic to encourage the newcomer to the ranks of young actresses to continue the pursuit of her "art." She caught a swell cold, was thoroughly banged up, bruised from head to foot, and altogether rendered virtually hors de combat for several ensuing days.

Only the persistence of her grandmother, who has virtually raised the "flapper star," was instrumental in persuading her to continue before, instead of behind, the cameras.

ALICE WHITE, along with all her naturalness and genuineness, is by way of being a bit of a gamester, too. The breach that brought about her present vaudeville tour, and temporarily arrested her career on the screen, she refers to gallantly enough, it seems to me, as "a little misunderstanding with my studio."

That studio, incidentally, is not averse to renewing cordial relations with their diminutive star now that they have been privileged to observe that she has a large and a loyal following among those who compile record-breaking grosses at the box offices.

It is particularly gratifying to Miss White that so many youngsters flock around her everywhere she plays, in quest of pictures, autographs or perhaps only a "hello." She never slights any of these staunch admirers, holding it to be unpardonable to evade such adulation, as was recently done by a visiting male star who immured himself in his dressing room from morning 'til night and then ran through the crowds of cheering fans when it finally became necessary to leave the theater after his last performance.

Alice, however, has completely analyzed his case.

"The guy must have been 'nerts'!" she says.

And who am I to contradict a lady?

TULANE AIMS TO UPHOLD SOUTH'S COAST RECORD

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

QUITE the finest football battle of the year in Washington was Saturday's game between the Coast Guards and the Marines for the President's Cup.

The Bears and the Leathernecks struck a mighty blow in the cause of service football in the Capital with their thrill-packed exhibition that resulted in the Marines' loss of the cherished trophy for the second time since 1924, when the big silver cup was placed in competition by Calvin Coolidge.

The manner in which the Marines took the play away from the undefeated Coast Guards in the opening minutes with a spectacular touchdown presaged the pulsating battle which eventuated and left the 6,000 spectators quivering and thrilled at the finish, which saw the Marines again pounding away on the 2-yard line when the watch ticked off the final second, after a gallant effort to offset the two goals that the Bears had scored in the final half.

Team for team, the Marines were outclassed by the powerful, well-drilled Coast Guard eleven, which demonstrated that its eight consecutive victories were no myth. The Marines met a better line and a superior back field, and only the ever-present fight of the Leathernecks enabled them to stave off the power in the Guards' attack for almost three full quarters of the game.

The ferocity of the Marine tackles in the first half all but convinced the Coast Guard that its famed attack would not be successful, and it was well into the third quarter before the Guards realized that they had in Marynard's plunging behind a militant line a weapon that could pierce the defense of the Leathernecks.

This Maynard was a pleasing prototype of a Marine star of yore, Frank Goettge, and old Marines in the audience were reminded of the day when a Maynard in Leatherneck regalia tore his way through opposing lines in the same manner that the Coast Guard power house burst across the scrimmage line and then dragged the entire secondary defense along with him before he was brought to earth.

Even in the greatest intensity of the battle when the game had worn into the final minutes and the Marines were striving desperately to score the touchdown that would tie the score, the service teams taught their collegiate contemporaries a lesson in good sportsmanship.

With the game becoming increasingly rough, Referee Brooke Brewer called both teams into a huddle in the center of the field, pointed out that there was "piling on" and admonished them not to let the game get out of bounds. Then Coast Guard and Marine shook hands all around, each slapped his opponent on the back, and went back to resume the battle the best of friends.

There was but one penalty for other than offside play and the game that was full of disheartening changes in advantages was remarkably cleanly played throughout. The Coast Guards and Marines will be welcomed back to Washingto nenxt year in the President's Cup game.

The football season in the East faces a grand climax on Saturday when the Army and Navy clash at New York in the name of charity.

The week-end's developments has had the effect of a shot in the arm of fan interest in the service battle. Navy's triumph over Penn at Philadelphia was the tonic needed to give the game a serious outlook. Three days ago critics were ready to concede Army the victory by an overwhelming margin. Today the Navy must be taken seriously, at least.

Coach Rip Miller, of the Midshipmen, illustrated against Penn that all of Navy's deefats were not involuntary. Miller wisely refrained from using his ace, Lou Kirn, against Notre Dame, Southern Methodist, Delaware and other teams who beat the Navy when Kirn's presence might have meant a different outcome. But apparently he was saving his star for the Penn and Army games, and his presence in the line-up, which means that he will throw the Navy passes and lead the Navy offense, gives the Navy a weapon which the Army will do well not to underestimate.

3-Year Contract Signed by Dawson

Virginia Likes Work of Grid Coach, Despite Poor Record Made by Team.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 6.—Fred T. Dawson has accepted a three-year contract to serve the University of Virginia as head coach of football on a twelve months basis, according to announcement made today by James G. Driver, athletic director, following a meeting last night of the athletic council. The council also offered one-year contracts to Edward R. Slaughter, former Michigan all-American, to continue as line coach, and Roy Randall, captain of Brown's "Iron Men," to serve as director of first-year athletics.

The contracts of Gus Tebell, head coach of basket ball and baseball, and of Archie Hahn, trainer and track coach, run through June, 1933.

Coach Dawson came to Virginia this fall without a contract. Although the Cavalier eleven won only one game, students and faculty agree that he and his assistants did an excellent job of coaching and there has been a widespread demand that he be given a long contract.

ROACH'S SHOT WINS.

Los Angeles, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—A long shot by Hal Roach won a polo match today for a picked California team over the hard-riding quartet from Mexico City. The score of the extra chukker conflict was 11 to 10.

Hawks Rally To Tie With Apaches

Wells Leads Drive to Late Touchdown; Score, 6 to 6.

Antos' Run Paves Way for Apache Score Near Start.

BILLY WELLS, former George Washington University player, donned the No. 9 jersey that Leon Fouts wore when he ran a kick-off back to a touchhdown against Irvington and earned the Mohawks a 6-6 tie with the Apaches before some 2,000 fans, the smallest crowd ever to witness a clash between those rivals.

Perhaps the No. 9 jersey was a coincidence. Fouts could hardly get his head through the neck of it a week after his famous run. Wells wore it inconspicuously for part of the game, but as the time wore on that "9" loomed larger and larger as a threat to the six-point lead that the Apaches had taken in the opening period.

Wells Good Through Line, Too.

Wells, who throws a pass like a javelin, began getting the range of the receivers late in the third period and when his tosses failed to connect took to carrying the ball through the line with enough skill to pale the work of Snitz Snyder and the other regular Hawk backs.

It was the second tie between the Apaches and the Mohawks this season, the Little Indians taking the other game and retaining their District title.

Getting back to the scoring, the Mohawk air parade started from its 45-yard line. Wells connected with successive passes to Snyder, O'Brien and Flaherty and then followed with 20-yard dash off tackle, being pulled down 3 yards from the goal. The Apaches made a game stand here, Helvestine falling to make six inches on two plunges after his first try had put the nose of the ball just a shade from the chalk mark. Snyder slammed himself over by inches on the last down.

Tuck Dalgish was afforded the hero chance, coming into the game to try the drop-kick for the point that would have brought victory. However, the ball slid off the left side of Dalgish's foot and dropped near the goal line.

The Apaches scored at the start of the game, and the manner in which the touchdown was accomplished seemed to forecast a lop-sided score. A pass, ruled completed because of interference with Ray Du-Four, Apache end, started the action. Chessy Antos then squirmed off tackle, wiggled his way clear and ran

Elimination of Tie Games On Gridiron Believed Near

Charity Tournaments Have Afforded Chance for Experiment; Judges' Decisions Have Proved Popular in Short Contests.

By DIXON STEWART.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Ultimate elimination of tie games—football's most unsatisfactory feature—appeared a possibility today as a result of tests conducted in charity football tournaments.

The charity tournaments were arranged by E. K. Hall, chairman of the football rules committee, acting for Owen D. Young's committee on unemployment relief, and he took full advantage of the opportunity to experiment with the elimination of ties.

Judges were named to decide the winner of any tournament game ending with a tied score. In two tourneys played to date, one at Chicago Thanksgiving Day and the second at New Haven yesterday, three games ended in scoreless ties.

The judges named a winner in each of the deadlocked contests, basing their decisions on the amount of ground gained, first downs, superiority of defense and offense and generalship. And in each instance the decision of the judges met with the approval of spectators.

At the Yale tournament the teams were of almost even strength, but spectators were agreed that Brown was entitled to the decision over Dartmouth in the first scoreless tie and that Yale earned an advantage over Brown in the second. It appeared much fairer to give a decision on the basis of superior play throughout the game than to let the games go into the records as tied contests.

Chairman Hall was an interested observer of the charity tourney and expressed satisfaction with the deciding games by judges decisions. He believes that the idea is too radical a change to be introduced to football rules at the present time, but indicated that the experiment would be continued with a possibility that the rules committee ultimately may provide for the deciding of all tied games by a committee of judges.

A third charity tournament is

Navy's Hopes Rise After Victory

Defeat of Penn Tonic Needed for Battle With Army.

Kirn's Return to Best Form Encourages Annapolis.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 6.—Navy football players came out of the hard game with University of Pennsylvania yesterday in better condition physically than has been the attending aftermath of any other contest of the year. This is certainly an encouraging situation with the few days remaining to prepare for the charity game with the rival Army eleven to be played in the Yankee Stadium next Saturday.

The Middies used only three substitutes in the game against the Quakers. It was the first time that such a large proportion of the starting line-up finished a game. The replacements were Murray at left end for Smith; McCrea, left tackle for "Buck" James, and Kane, right tackle, for Lou Bryan. All of which was taken to indicate that the players are in the top of condition physically.

Smith Only Middie Injured.

Withdrawing Smith from the game was the only instance of necessity. He was injured, but only slightly. James and Bryan retired only because Head Coach Rip Miller wanted his two first string tackles to have a workout, with the Army battle so near at hand.

James, by the way, was an unexpected starter in Saturday's fray. His physical condition had not been of the best since the early season games, and in the interim McCrea had been performing in a highly satisfactory manner. But James, it appears, is the more alert and certainly he waged a great battle against the Red and Blue.

It now seems likely therefore that James will start the game with the West Pointers, and the work of Murray in yesterday's fracas puts him in good stead for a fixture. Anyway he has been waging a warm fight with Smith and Elliott for a terminal post. He not only did great work in smearing the Penn interference, but was lightning fast in getting down field under kicks.

Those who saw the Penn game are loud in their praises of "Sammy" Moncure, both as to his individual efforts and the manner in which he directed the play. Also it is the consensus of opinion that the Tars put up their most consistently good game of the season, and that against a foe

Alabama Game Officials Open Drive for Seat Sale

Visitors Bring One of Football's Greatest Teams for Triple-Header Against G. W., C. U., and G. U. Saturday.

WITH the date of the game only six days distant, officials in charge of the triple-header charity relief football game at Griffith Stadium have redoubled their efforts to sell tickets. Believing that hundreds of the city's children would like to contribute to the success of the game, proceeds of which will go to the District Committee on Employment, the committee announces a special offer to children under 16 years of age, who may purchase tickets to the center field bleachers at 50 cents each. The time limit on this offer is Thursday night.

These tickets, along with others admitting to the grandstands, reserved seats and box seats are on sale at Griffith Stadium and at Spalding's, 1338 G street northwest. The committee also announces that 1,000 sideline seats, priced at $1.50 each, remain available, and will be disposed of on the first come, first served, basis.

The sideline section is regarded by frequenters of stadium football games as the choice spot in the entire lay-out. In this section will be seated the students of George Washington, Catholic and Georgetown Universities; whose elevens will engage Alabama University's Rose Bow' champions of 1930 in three 20-minute games.

Eight members of the Alabama squad are at present on the 1931 Crimson Tide team, which is one of the strongest elevens in the South. Last Saturday Alabama defeated Chattanooga, champion of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, by a score of 39 to 0. Previously, Chattanooga had won all of its games.

Beginning today the Alabamians—24 of them composing the squad that trounced Washington State, 24-0, last New Year's Day—will practice on the plays they used during the season of 1930. On Thursday they will arrive for the first of two practices in Griffith Stadium. Thursday's workout will be public and the committee extends an invitation to Washington fandom to witness the Southerners go

Dixie Teams Unbeaten in Rose Bowl

Alabama Has Won 2 Games, Tech Won and Tied.

Coach Bierman Takes 3 Full Teams to Pasadena.

ATLANTA, Dec. 6 (A.P.)—Tulane University's acceptance o an invitation to face Southern California in the Pasadena Rose Bowl football classic marks the fifth time since 1925 the South has furnished one of the contestants for this annual New Year's Day spectacle.

The New Orleans team, which clinched the Southern Conference championship a week before with a victory over Louisiana State, yesterday defeated Washington State for its second intersectional win of the season.

The triumph over the Coast team boosted Tulane above the other teams being considered for the holiday game and quickly brought an invitation from the Southern California and Rose Bowl officials.

Such a move by Southern California has been anticipated since Northwestern was eliminated from the possible list a week before, when the Purple lost to Purdue, leaving Tulane alone in the field of major undefeated elevens.

Tulane Highly Regarded.

"We regard Tulane, champion of the Southern conference," said Willis O. Hunter, director of Trojan athletics, "as the outstanding team of both the South and East, and the logical Rose Bowl opponent for the Trojans, Pacific coast conference champions."

The Green Wave, America's only major unbeaten and untied eleven, will carry with it the South's reputation of never having lost a Rose Bowl engagement. Three times Alabama's Crimson Tide has crossed the continent and Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado made the long trip, and out of these conflicts the South has three victories and one tie.

Alabama won the first of these games, 20 to 19 from the University of Washington in 1926, and the following year tied Stanford, 7 to 7. Again in 1930 the powerful Tuscaloosa team, Southern Conference champions, was victorious, defeating Washington State 24 to 0.

Georgia Tech was the Southern representative in 1929 and won from California, 8 to 7, in a game featured by Roy Reigels' famous reverse run.

Some Southern experts rate Tulane on a par with the three Alabama teams and the Georgia Tech eleven which have played in the Rose Bowl. Others say it's better than these teams.

Tulane Unbeaten In 3 Years.

Tulane has been unbeaten in the South for three years. This year the Greenies won eleven games, including Southern Conference decisions over Mississippi, Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech, Auburn, Georgia, Mississippi A. and M., Sewanee and Louisiana State, intersectional wins over Texas A. and M., and Washington State and a non-conference triumph over Spring Hill.

The master mind behind the powerful eleven from the banks of the Mississippi is Bernard (Bernie) W. Bierman, who learned his football at Minnesota, where in 1915 he was half back and captain of Minnesota's last Big Ten championship team. The Rose Bowl game will be his last at Tulane, for it was announced he would return next year to his alma mater, Minnesota, as head coach.

Tulane possesses a fast, but heavy eleven. The line is one of the South's best, flanked by Jerry Dalrymple, an All-American end, and Vernon Haynes. Other stellar linemen are Scafide, all-Southern guard; Lodrigues, center; McCormick, guard, and Upton, tackle.

The back field revolves around a lightning fast triple threat half back, Don Zimmerman, and a plunging full back, Nollie Felts. Lowell Dawson, quarter back, and Payne round out the first quartet.

Bierman probably will carry three full teams of Tulane players to the West Coast.

Cheer Leaders Aid Sing Sing to Win

Zebras in 18-2 Victory; 2,000 Rooters Back "Home Team."

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The "Zebras" of dear old Sing Sing, heartened by organized cheering from 2,000 convicts, administered a drubbing today to the "Wakefield Bears of the Bronx by a score of 18 to 2.

Alabama Pitts, captain and quarter back for the prions eleven who has been in the hospital for two weeks, got into the line-up for the first two plays of the second half.

Four convict cheer leaders, dressed in white uniforms, led the "home team" rooters for the first time, cheering having been spontaneous and unorganized in previous games.

Sing Sing closes the 1931 football season—the first year of football in he insiuion—next Sunday when the "Zebras" meet the White Plains Steam Rollers.

Hand, Oklahoma Star, In Serious Condition

Oklahoma City, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Ted Hand, star half back of the undefeated Oklahoma City university eleven, was in a serious condition at a local hospital tonight from a brain concussion received in a charity game with the University of Oklahoma yesterday.

Hand appeared normal during and after the game but lapsed into a semiconscious condition this morning and was taken to the hospital.

Majors to Discuss Salary Reductions

Baseball Magnates Will Also Consider Umpires, Radio Broadcasts.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Salary reductions of major league players, possible abandonment of double-headers and the three-umpire system, and the value of radio to baseball will be considered fully by National and American league club owners in annual meetings here this week.

The two leagues will hold separate sessions Tuesday and Wednesday, and will meet jointly Thursday.

Mixed with discussion of these paramount issues will be the "deals" and trades expected to strengthen member teams next year.

Minor league officials at West Baden last week voted to set maximum salary limits for players, but it is expected the major clubs will avoid this, merely letting each club determine what the cuts should be. Reductions will be advised, it is believed.

A cut in the number of officiating umpires is particularly favored among clubs of the National circuit. The question of pay for radio rights, and the rights of broadcast sponsors also will be fully discussed. The plan of scheduling Sunday double-headers appears unpopular enough to be abandoned next season by the owners.

ALL TEAMS TIED AT .000.

The first three games on the 1931 Missouri College Athletic Union schedule left every team with a .000 standing. All the games were ties.

11 Intersectional Games for Big Ten

Northwestern, Purdue List "Suicide Schedules" for Next Grid Year.

Chicago, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Big Ten football teams will go scouting for plenty of opposition outside of their own conference backyards next fall. The 1931 line-up, ratified today by the Big Ten chiefs, listed eleven intersectional and nonconference games against powerhouse elevens from Stanford in the far West to Yale, Princeton, Penn and New York University in the East.

Northwestern and Purdue appeared in for the real "suicide schedules" of the Big Ten group. The two teams, which tied with Michigan for the 1931 championship, scheduled eight straight games without a rest offered on the card. The Wildcats have Stanford as their second foe, at Palo Alto, and later meet Notre Dame at South Bend. Purdue had intersectional games scheduled with the Kansas Aggies and New York University.

The high spots of the intersectional and nonconference card are:

Northwestern: Missouri, Stanford and Notre Dame.

Purdue: Kansas Aggies and New York University.

Chicago: Yale at New Haven in a return date.

Ohio State: Pennsylvania.

Michigan: Princeton at Ann Arbor in a return date

Iowa: George Washington at Washington, D. C. in a return date.

Minnesota: Nebraska and Mississippi.

Greenleaf Is Tied For Title Cue Lead

Ex-King of Pocket-Billiard World and Rudolph, Present Champ, Unbeaten.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—Erwin Rudolph, veteran Cleveland defending champion, and Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, a former champion, held the upper hand in the world's pocket billiard championship tournament here at the end of the first week's play. Each had not been defeated and each had three wins.

Greenleaf, alone of the four former champions entered, had remained superior to the younger entrants who during the week defeated the veterans. Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., especially seemed easy prey for the youngsters, losing to Al Miller, of Racine, Wis.; Andy Ponzi, of Philadelphia, and Onofrio Lauri, of Brooklyn.

Lauri and Greenleaf both shot a high run of 85 to lead in that angle of play, while Greenleaf also tied his 1929 record of winning a game in two innings.

The standings:

	W.	L.	H.R.
Rudolph, Cleveland	3	0	84
Greenleaf, New York	3	0	85
Kelly, Philadelphia	3	1	38
Ponzi, Philadelphia	3	1	70
Taberski, Schenectady	2	1	53
Allen, Kansas City	2	2	51
Lauri, Brooklyn	2	2	85
Camp, Detroit	1	2	36
Layton, Sedalia, Mo.	1	3	29
Miller, Racine, Wis.	1	3	29
Livsey, Los Angeles	1	3	50
Lindblom, Seattle	0	4	42

GAMES TOMORROW.

Afternoon—Ponzi vs. Lauri; Livsey vs. Lindblom.

Night—Taberski vs. Camp; Rudolph vs. Miller.

ENGLEWOOD LIKELY WINNER IN JEFFERSON PARK FEATURE

Totem Picked To Finish Second

Dick Morris Seen as Day's Best Bet; Goes in Fourth Race.

Snodgrass Looks for Hal Riley to Repeat in Final.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, La., Dec. 6.—A program of claiming events, which attracted a total of 119 thoroughbreds in the seven races, will be offered the patrons of Jefferson Park tomorrow afternoon. The outstanding event, fifth on the card, named the Westend Purse, received a list of eight starters to contest the mile and a sixteenth feature, which is fashioned for 3-year-olds and upward.

The rest of the events will be decided by the cheaper grade of platers over the heavy strip. Five of the remaining races received the limit of 20 entries, with the inevitable wholesale scratching at post time bound to occur.

In the Westend the field appears fairly evenly matched and a close finish is expected. However, ENGLEWOOD, from the Mrs. S. C. Hunt stable, which displayed speed to race Deemster to a neck last start, is dropping 12 pounds off that effort and figures to score. TOTEM has trained briskly after a short rest and is reported in fine fettle. COME ON appears best of the others for the show.

FIRST RACE—Three-year olds exclusively will battle it out in the 6 furlongs of the curtain raiser. THE JUDGE has demonstrated his ability to negotiate heavy going and under the conditions will be hard to beat. MY INVER showed a clever performance last outing and is favored for the place, with RAFFLER CON as the show possibility.

SECOND RACE—DECEPTIVE, from the L. Abel stable, raced creditably in his New York campaign this fall and appears well placed against the field he meets in the 6 furlongs of the second. MAKANDA and LAZY MARY should finish in that order for the remainder of the purse.

THIRD RACE—Another cheap field of platers will face the barrier in the third event, a gallop of 1 mile. SMOLDERING has shown the most consistent form of this poor lot and, on his best efforts, must be accorded a chance in this open tussle. SOUR MASH would favor a longer route but nevertheless is given the place call. SANTA SOPHIA, a fair mudder, will have PLAY BIRD to beat for the minor award.

FOURTH RACE—DICK MORRIS, a recent winner at this oval, appears the best wager of the entire card and should romp to an easy victory over his ten rivals in the 6 furlongs of the fourth. WHILE AWAY showed speed last start to finish second to Estin and should go as well here. DURVA has several races to recommend him and he may surprise.

SIXTH RACE—PUNKIE holds a slight edge over his rivals in the sixth. This event will be decided over the mile and 70 yards route and brings out a field of 20 claimers. WATER FOWL will be the one to beat. SAM COLE and FLAG LIEUTENANT should go well.

SEVENTH RACE—The last event, another overburdened affair, should result in a victory for J. F. Marsch's HAL RILEY. This consistent Jim Gaffney gelding scored in his previous two efforts and is on edge. ERIN GO BRAGH has shown improvement and should finish in the runner-up position. ROCKY WAY is favored to account for the show money.

Bethesda-C. C. Five Announces Schedule

A tough schedule lies before the basketers of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, which lists many seasoned foes outside of strictly intercounty contests. The season will open Friday against Ben Franklin, champs of the Washington Collegiate Conference.

Friends and Georgetown Prep are the lone local schools to appear on the table of games.

The schedule:

December 11, Ben Franklin, home; 12, Charlotte Hall, away; 15, Friends, home; 18, Georgetown, away; 19, Alumni, home.

January 8, Rockville, away; 12, Sherwood, home; 13, Mount Rainier, away; 15, Gaithersburg, home; 20, Brattleville, away; 22, Poolesville, away; 23, Charlotte Hall, home; 26, Damascus, home; 29, Bethesda, home.

February 2, Rockville, home; 5, Sherwood, away; 9, Gaithersburg, away; 12, Mount Rainier, home; 16, Poolesville, home; 19, Damascus, away; 23, Bethesda, away; 25, Georgetown Prep, home; 26, Friends, away.

ALABAMA TICKET DRIVE UNDER WAY through their paces. They will work out on Friday in secret.

Most notable of the invaders is big Fred Sington, 210 pound tackle, who was unanimously chosen by All-American selectors last year. Virtually every player from 'Bama was accorded all-star honors last year, either in the South or throughout the country. Sington has been keeping in physical trim this season by coaching at Duke University, assisting Wallace Wade, who tutored the Crimson Tide last year.

Washington's three teams will bear down beginning today in preparation for this most novel gridiron treat. All will be at full strength for the contests and each is hoping to outdo the other with Alabama as the common opponent. The occasion will afford the fans an opportunity they would not otherwise receive for picking the strongest team of the local trio.

Five crack bands will be there to contribute to the interest of the event. They are the Marine, Army and Navy bands, all tremendously popular in this city, and the bands of George Washington and Georgetown. The G. W. unit was organized about five weeks ago, making a favorable impression in its debut at the George Washington-North Dakota game on Thanksgiving Day.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

DURING her entire reign (1533-1603), Queen Elizabeth of England, was KING of FRANCE. Killikelly's "Curious Questions" gives us a good explanation.

Elizabeth asserted that if by action of the Salic law she could not be Queen of France, she would be King. In 1800, a change in the title of the reigning monarch of England was proposed. It was settled by privy council, that, in consequence of the Irish Union, the royal style and title should be changed from "George III., by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith," to "George III., by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith"; thus omitting "King of France," a title which had been borne by the monarchs of England for four hundred and thirty-two years, since the forty-third year of the reign of Edward III. (1312-1377). It was the Salic law that had excluded Edward from the throne of France.

A French king, it is related, once complained to a king of England because of his taking to himself the name of the King of France, when he did not possess a foot of French soil. The British monarch's retort was, "I am no more to blame than you are, who reckon among your titles King of Jerusalem, where no ancestor of yours has had any show of authority for five hundred years."

Chicago Bears Defeat Green Bay Packers, 7-6

Chicago, Dec 6 (A.P.).—The Chicago Bears defeated the Green Bay Packers, 7 to 6, today in a National Professional League football game.

The Bears scored their touchdown on the first three plays of the game. The Chicago team kicked off and on the first play Lewellyn, of the Packers, threw a pass.

Brumbaugh, of the Bears, intercepted the pass on the Packers' 35-yard line and carried the ball for 17 yards. Red Grance then passed to Litzenich for the touchdown. Tackwell kicked the extra point.

The Packers scored early in the second quarter after a long drive down the field to the Bears' 28-yard line. A pass, Lewellyn to Blood, accounted for the score. Red Dunn, the Packers' kicking ace, went into the game to try for the extra point, but his attempt failed.

Community League To Meet Tomorrow

An organization meeting of the Community Center Basket Ball League will be held tomorrow night at Franklin School, Thirteenth and K streets northwest, beginning at 8 o'clock. The meeting has been called by Winfree Johnson, president of the league, who invites managers of all unlimited teams interested to attend.

Fourteen teams competed in the league last year when the Clovers won the championship and the Julius Peyser Trophy. This prize will be up for competition again this season.

G. U. Frosh, Sophs In Grid Game Today

Georgetown University's annual battle of the Caps is "on again." It will be played tomorrow in Griffith Stadium, starting at 1:45 p. m. Differences between the frosh and sophs were settled yesterday, Neil Regan, chairman of the sophomores vigilance committee, announced. A clash between students last week resulted in a disciplinary measure calling off the game.

G. U. Prep Tossers Beat Alumni, 24-6

Holding their opponents to a trio of field goals, the Georgetown Prep Basket Ball Team experienced little difficulty in defeating the Alumni by a score of 24-6 at Garrett Park yesterday. McFadden, who found the net for two, and Palbot were the only members of the Alumni Team able to score. Nee and Nuray looked particularly good to the Preps, each coming through with six points. Deakin also played well for the victors.

SEMIWINDUP RING BOUTS LISTED

Irving-Vance, Marini-Reed Fights Added to Dec. 15 Card.

A DOUBLE semiwindup in support of the Billy Landers-Frankie McKenna match, to be staged Tuesday night, December 15, at the Portner Arena, Alexandria, for the benefit of the Alexandria Day Nursery, will be offered local boxing fans.

Henry Irving and Frank Vance will square off in one of the six round heats, which is expected to go about three, while Kid Cosden, shifty lightweight from Cordova, Md., and Jack Lamar, Cleveland, Ohio youngster, get together over the same route.

Marino to Take on Buck Reed.

Marino Marini, rugged little Italian, who added Nevin Barber to his growing list of victims in his last engagement, will meet Buck Reed, well-known Baltimore gladiator in a four-rounder. Roddy Davis has been selected to meet George Eusnik, who punched his way to a victory over Billy Hoe recently at Alexandria. Another four-rounder will open the show.

The return of the popular Sailor Landers, a human buzz-saw, to meet McKenna, is the rematching of a feud, which broke out at Portsmouth sometime ago when McKenna whipped Billy in eight heats.

Tickets for the show will be placed on sale here Wednesday at Vic's Sport Store and at Rigg's Bath, Fifteenth and G streets.

MERCURYS CHECK FRATERS' MARCH TO UNLIMITED CROWN

Capital City Elevens in 0-to-0 Tie

Largest Crowd of Season Sees Thriller at Alexandria.

Gunners Tie Fraters for Lead by Beating Del Ray, 20-0.

THE champion Mercury eleven, fighting to retain the crown which it won last year, threw a monkey wrench into the smooth proceedings of the unlimited division of The Post's Capital City League when it held a powerful Frater team to a scoreless tie before the largest crowd of the season at Alexandria yesterday. Approximately 2,500 fans turned out for the fray, which produced some spectacular play.

While the leaders were battling at Alexandria the Seaman Gunners spurted in the race to tie with the Fraters for the championship by smearing Del Ray, 20-0, on the latter's field. The only other game scheduled resulted in a scoreless deadlock between the Marions and Brookland.

Mercury Passes Up Opportunity.

Mercury's big opportunity to score came at the very outset of the contest when "Dug" Crupper fumbled Spaulding's kick on his own 5-yard line, where the ball was recovered for the visitors by Handiboe. The Fraters' stone wall line held, however, and pushed its opponents back to the 25-yard line, where the Alexandrians took the ball on downs. After an exchange of kicks the wingfeet aggregation penetrated to within its rival's 20-yard zone on two occasions, but each time the Fraters held, and two field goals, attempted by Spaulding, were wide of the mark.

A triple pass, Elliet Cabell, the Frater's ace half back, dashed around end for a 50-yard gain that carried the pigskin to the 20-yard line, but at this juncture the Mercs rallied and held for downs. A fake reverse play, that wandered off into a triple pass behind the line and ended up as a forward pass from Cabell to Bell, netted the home club 45 yards in the last period, the ball coming to rest on the Mercury 30-yard line. Here the Fraters were again checked.

The result of this game makes possible a triple tie, with the Fraters, Mercury and Seaman Gunners involved, for the title. To conclude in this manner the Dixie Pigs must trounce the Fraters next Sunday and Mercury must down the Griff-Blue Coals.

Del Ray offered stubborn resistance to the Seaman Gunners in the first half of their game, but gradually weakened in the last two periods under the bruising attack of the invaders. Pierce crossed the final chalkmark for two of the Sailors' markers and Young accounted for the third. The Gunners enjoyed a wide margin of superiority over Del Ray and were never pressed after midway in the third stanza. The work of Lusby, and Gensmere, for the losers, and Narushoff and Nelson, in addition to the entire back field for the victors, was outstanding.

The Marions and Brookland had an off-day and neither team exhibited much in the way of football. The contest was without spectacular plays despite the earnest endeavor of both elevens.

JUNIORS WIN IN G. U. GRID BATTLE

Seniors Beaten, 13-6; Connelly, Kelly in Star Roles.

LED by Paul Connelly and Al Kelly, track stars, the juniors defeated the seniors for the intramural football championship of Georgetown University yesterday by a score of 13 to 6 on the Georgetown Medical College field.

Connelly's line plunges and end runs caused the seniors trouble throughout, while Kelly scored an extra point on an end run. The seniors scored first when McNamara passed to Murphy, who fell over the goal line with the ball in the first quarter, but the juniors came back to take the lead in the second period as Schlafly blocked McNamara's punt, fell on the ball in the end zone for a touchdown, and Kelly sprinted around end for the extra point.

Connelly's interception of a pass led to the second junior touchdown, which was scored after a march of 40 yards with Farley taking the ball across.

Samuel L. Clemens was a visitor at the House of Representatives. Mr. Clemens is better known as Mark Twain.

The Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. Henry Satterlee, and the Rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, the Rev. Ernest Smith, are not in agreement as to the disposition of funds to be raised at a benefit to be given later this month at the Belasco Theater.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE CONSOLATION.

(The United States Golf Association at its November meeting definitely outlawed the balloon golf ball, returning to a ball the same weight as the old one.—News item.)

* * * *

Though the world is steeped in trouble,
And the outlook's rather grave,
And your face is full of stubble
In the absence of a shave—
Though the poorhouse may seem near you,
And the wolf appears to roar,
There is this sweet thought to cheer you—
Last year's golf ball is no more!

You may find the sledding tougher
As the winter holds its sway,
And the bosses may seem rougher
In the way they slash your pay;
All the world may seem in pickle,
But there's this to ease the pain—
That "new" golf ball, light and fickle,
Ne'er will bother you again!

Food may seem to you elusive
And you may not have the rent—
All your thoughts may be conducive
To a wail and a lament;
You may have no shoes for baby,
Lacking credit at the store,
But there's this to cheer you, maybe—
The balloon ball's day is o'er!

Stocks may bust and crash and tumble,
Dividends may all be cut;
All the world may squawk and grumble,
And your home may be a hut;
Every hope may seem an ember,
Every word of cheer the bunk,
But there's this thing to remember—
That golf ball has been sunk!

Creditors galore may tail you—
They may force you to the wall;
Pessimism may assail you
As you see no hope at all;
Faced by want and deprivation,
Gloom may close in all about,
But there's this one consolation—
That balloon golf ball is out!

Let the war clouds grow—what matter?
Let the world to pieces go!
Let the markets bust and spatter—
Let the money troubles grow!
Let the fogs and mists keep clinging—
All is not so bleak and gray—
For the spring will soon be bringing
In a GOLF BALL I CAN PLAY!

NO TRADING STAMPS?

A NEW YORK Stock Exchange seat sold as low as $148,000 this week, and it is understood the board arranged for time payments and to throw in a pair of handsome blankets, a jar of aspirin tablets, McWhiffolwey's Dream Book and a lovely alarm o'clock.

A CAMPAIGN SUGGESTION.

The Tariff Commission and the President have lowered the duty on egg plants, fresh green peppers, window glass, crude feldspar and turned shoes. How about a slogan for the next campaign: "Keep in egg plants and green peppers with Hoover!"

What Today Means to You

"SAGITTARIUS."

IF December 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a. m. to 10:40 a. m., and from 1:20 p. m. to 3 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 11 p. m.

Disquieting influences will be at work December 7 and may be felt both within and out of the home a danger through a new rival! Creative workers, especially those of the mental type, will find their powers stimulated and their efforts appreciated.

The child born on this December 7 will have a secretive nature, and will take few into its confidence. It will be shrewd, decisive, punctual, energetic, dependable and conscientious. When it makes up its mind to do a thing, it generally does it. It will love with intensity.

You, if born on Deember 7, are content to follow the line of least resistance, and to get through life with more comfort than distinction. You, as much as is possible, let the other fellow do the worrying, while you nonchalantly enjoy yourself or wait for events to prove themselves. You are hasty and loquacious, and both talk yourself into and out of trouble. "A slip of the foot may soon be recovered, but that of the tongue perhaps never." When aggravated, you either bluster or sulk in silence, whichever role appeals to you at the moment.

Your social gifts are probably more in the ascendant than your business or intellectual talents. You know how and when to flatter people, and you are not timid about pulling wires for your own benefit. Your cleverness in reading other's characters is one of your biggest assets, and you play up to their weaknesses. You are a sincerely sympathetic listener. You are long on giving advice and always have attractive remedies to hand out for the cure of all problems.

The one thing in life which you take very seriously is your affections. If the right person wins your love, their influence may change your outlook, increase your ambitions, and supply that which you lack—a purpose in life.

Successful people born on December 7:

William B. Rogers, founder of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Elizabeth H. Whittier, sister of John G. Whittier.

William Saunders, horticulturist.

Nancy A. W. P. Wakefield, poet.

Michael Cudahy, merchant.

George E. Church, civil engineer.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

THE CRITICAL AGE IN WOMEN.

SIR Arbuthnot Lane says this is the time when a woman's sins against the laws of health find her out. So far as this world is concerned it is woman's greatest judgment day. He says those who have been self-indulgent must now step up to the window and pay the check. If they sinned in the matter of eating, they get fat and lose their figure. If they have indulged in liquor their physical coarseness becomes apparent and the nose may light up. If they have been smoking they get out of breath on slight exertion. If they have been self-indulgent as regards their intestinal functions they will get liverish, their complexions will coarsen, and they will become especially susceptible to germ diseases, according to Sir Arbuthnot.

This, for them, is the season of cancer and neglect of some sort is often a cause, though only contributing cause of that disease.

It is in this critical age that woman's mental and emotional sins register on her face. If she has indulged in the sin of worry and anxiety, transverse wrinkles are recorded on her brow. If she has indulged in melancholy thoughts, down come the corners of her mouth. This is the period in which women suffer from hot flashes, a form of dizziness, and emotional storms. This group of disorders result from changes that are incident to the period, whereas those recorded in earlier paragraphs are sequent to the habits of a liftime.

For this second group there is relief. There are many preparations of ovarian extract on the market and any woman can escape the disagreeable sensations that characterize the menopause. These preparations are gradually being standardized and, in most cases, one can get what she pays for. The preparations can be used in any one of at least three ways.

The outbreaks of a perverted transitional personality can be controlled by the exercise of patience and the cultivation of tranquillity. As to those developments at the menopause which result from bad habits, not much can be done by way of cure. The effect is too firmly rooted.

It is possible to make reasonably good compromises and in that way save something. For instance, careful regulation of eating will make it possible for a person with gall stones, gall bladder trouble, and indigestion, reasonably comfortable. Regulation of eating can keep the weight about where it should be. Systematic exercise can help. Massaging the face with ice will tend to remove some wrinkles and other blemishes.

We need a living manual for women of 50. When sent a stamped, addressed envelope and request I supply a booklet on the subject, but it is only a primer. We need a larger text.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR 39 DEAD IS HELD BY ELKS OF CAPITAL

PAST GRAND EXALTED RULER GIVES ADDRESS

Name of Daniel R. Nihion, Who Died at Ball, Latest Added to List.

Acting with more than 2,000 other lodges all over the country, Washington Lodge, No. 15, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks conducted its thirty-seventh memorial service last night at the Elks' Home, 919 H street northwest.

The purple cross in the center of a large white one, which symbolizes the number of Elks of the local lodge who have died since the last memorial service was held, was illuminated with 39 bulbs as the solemnn music of an organ filled the memorial hall. These are more deaths than have occurred in any single year since the lodge was organized, it was announced. Approximately 600 others have died since the lodge was started half a century ago.

Lawrence H. Rupp, of the Allentown, Pa., lodge, past grand exalted ruler, made the memorial address. He minimized the sorrow surrounding death by relating how many men have conquered the loss of relatives and friends by filling their hearts with renewed hope and turning their minds to idealistic objectives.

Works of Elks Is Told.

He illustrated this with quotations from several poets, and told of what Elks are accomplishing and have set out to accomplish throughout the United States.

The exercises were opened with Chopin's Funeral March played on the organ. This was followed by a barytone solo, "There Is No Death." Officers of the lodge then entered and took their places. The names of those who have died in the past year were read by William S. Shelby, secretary of the lodge. As each name was called a purple light appeared in the center of the large white cross, until an entire new cross was formed.

Other officers who took part in the ceremony were: David J. LaPorte, exalted ruler; Leonard M. Gawler, esteemed leading knight; Joseph P. Fagerty, esteemed loyal knight; John T. CARAWAY MEMORIAL PLANNED BY WOMEN

Jury Service Test Is Urged at Meeting Here of National Party.

Members of the National Woman's Party, meeting here in biennial convention, launched plans yesterday for a memorial to Thaddeus Caraway, late senator from Arkansas, in recognition of his work on behalf of equality for women. Plans were also made for an official welcome to Mrs. Hattie Caraway, widow of the senator, who has been chosen to succeed him in the Senate.

The memorial, according to present plans, will have as a central feature the words that Senator Caraway uttered in dedicating Alva Belmont house, headquarters of the National Woman's Party, located on Capitol Hill, at 144 B street northeast.

The words are: "The last shot for the freedom of the States was fired from this building and I confidently predict the last shot for woman's freedom will be fired from here."

A jury service protest case should be started to test the legality of appeal by women convicted by a jury without a member of their sex serving on it, Miss Gail Laughlin, of Maine, asserted at the afternoon session. Miss Laughlin is the author of the jury service bill passed in California.

Equality in Night Work.

Without exception the working women of Georgia and Rhode Island, employed in the mills and factories, are emphatically opposed to any legislation that would abolish night work for women, the convention was told by Miss Josephine Casey, of Illinois, who made a tour of these two States. These women want equal rights with men in regard to working at night, according to Miss Casey.

Miss Maud Younger, congressional chairman of the party, spoke on the extension of the work of the party into international fields and said that four international conventions have been held within the past two years.

An equal rights dinner was held last night in the Chinese room of the Mayflower at which six speakers made addresses on the different phases of equal rights.

Wiley, national chairman, told of the accomplishments by women since equal suffrage, and Miss Kathleen O'Connell, a mill worker from Georgia, spoke on equal rights in industry.

The convention will end today with the election of officers and the reports of the resolution committee.

WILBUR PREDICTS DRY LAW SUCCESS

More Young People Obeying Statute, He Tells Closing W. C. T. U. Session.

Addresses by Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and Joy Elmer Morgan, editor of the National Education Association Magazine, featured a concluding session of the regional conference of the Women's Christian Temperance Union yesterday afternoon at the Foundry M. E. Church.

A prayer meeting, attended by several hundred members, was held at the Mayflower Hotel last night. It was conducted by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the union. Silent and spoken prayers were invoked for advancement of law enforcement. Stress was placed on the need for added pressure in enforcing the prohibition law.

Law enforcement was the keynote of Secretary Wilbur's address. He predicted a more serious observance of the prohibition law in the future, and expressed the opinion that more younger people of the Nation are observing it than before. The fact is being brought home, he told the women, that the law should be observed as a patriotic duty.

As a supplementary feature of the conference, a wreath will be laid at the base of the statue of Frances Willard in Statuary Hall at the Capitol today by Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, of Des Moines, vice president of the W. C. T. U.

The conference was opened last Friday with a storm session at which the spotlight was cast on the forthcoming presidential campaign with a backward glance on the last one. Every effort was made at the conference to organize the women and present a solid front in the 1932 presidential campaign. Twenty-four other conferences are to be held in various parts of the country to continue this work.

LEADER RAPS PLANS ON DRY REFERENDUM

Clinton N. Howard Declares Nation Is Doomed if Demands Are Met.

"This country is doomed and damned if it surrenders to the demands of the wets for a referendum," said Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the National United Committee of Law Enforcement in addresses to two Washington congregations yesterday.

"Do not be misled by those who are prophesying early repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The American people have been slow to amend their organic law. They have never put anything into the Constitution in haste, and they have never taken anything out after they have once put it in," the speaker declared.

The topic of the talk was "The Future of Phohibition," and was given in the morning at the National United Brethren Church and at the evening at the Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Commenting further upon the probability of the people of the United States amending the Constitution, he said, "If they ever do, the last two to go will be the thirteenth amendment that abolished slavery and the eighteenth amendment that abolished the saloon. It required 36 States out of 48 to put prohibition in; it will require 36 States out of 48 to take it out, no matter which constitutional plan the wets employ.

"The President has refused to yield. He has stood by the platform on which the American people elected him. He has met every crisis with a constructive program that has contributed to national and international stability, with revolution, communism and financial chaos threatening the world.

"He has piloted the Ship of State through the whirlpool rapids of international suspicion, economic suspension and Asiatic strife.

"Any candidate, or party, standing for nullification by indirection while the eighteenth amendment remains in the Constitution is headed for disaster in the next presidential election," he concluded.

Gifts for 1,500 Aim Of Central Mission

Arrangements Started for Party on Christmas for Needy Children.

The Central Union Mission will play Santa Claus to 1,500 or more poor children of Washington at its annual Christmas Day party for which preparations have begun, it was announced last night.

Mrs. John S. Bennett, who is in charge, said that each of the more than 1,500 cases is being given individual attention. Christmas bags are being distributed among the churches of the city and many clubs also have sent in requests.

There is no limit, Mrs. Bennett said, to the number of bags an individual or organization may fill. She stressed, however, that unless articles of clothing, with a few toys and candies, were the greatest need in filling the bags.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge always attended the Christmas parties of the Central Union Mission. When Mrs. Herbert Hoover became the First Lady, she kept up the tradition and it is hoped that she will be able to attend the party this year.

YULE MAILING LIMIT NEAR, MOONEY SAYS

Postmaster Urges Patrons to Send Bulk of Their Gifts This Week.

Postmaster Mooney yesterday urged patrons of the Washington postoffice to do at least the bulk of their Christmas gift mailing this week.

"By the first of next week the annual pre-Christmas strain and overload will be thrown on the postal departments throughout the country," Mr. Mooney pointed out. "Reports from other cities show that the earlier mailing of Christmas gift packages has attained tremendous headway throughout the country this year. We hope to see this week a big mailing week in this city."

The postmaster further pointed out that the "dead line" for certain types of Christmas package mailing is rapidly approaching. Gift packages destined for foreign countries should be mailed immediately if they are to catch the ocean mails, while packages for California and the Far West and South at points in this country should be in the mail by December 14.

Postmaster Mooney was enthusiastic in expressing his approval of the action of Washington merchants in making their complete Christmas stocks available earlier this year.

'HAPPINESS' IS GOAL IN LIFE, CLERIC SAYS

Dr. Depp Asserts That Many Have Found It Even in Hardships.

"The one word that comes nearest answering the question, 'What do we want to get out of life?' is happiness," said the Rev. Mark Depp preaching last night at the Calvary Methodist Episcopal church, Columbia road near Fifteenth street northwest. Dr. Deep's sermon was on the subject, "Jazz or Joy."

"The question of the greatest good, the best goal of life, has been discussed directly and indirectly more than any other; but we do not let it alone for the simple reason that we are tied up in this business of life—we are in the arena and the game is on. What do we want to get out of life? Our deepest, strongest desire, what is it?"

"If one prayer could be granted, what would it be? Not robust health nor even personal beauty, for if by some magic everybody could be made strong and vigorous and all women beautiful as the famed Helen of Troy, the question would still remain—what to do with life?"

"Not fame, although it is a legitimate desire to be well thought of, to be known and admired, and better still, to make some contribution to the welfare of the world before for us the curtain rings down. Not wealth, excepting only the downright misers, of whom there are but few, for no man desires money but for what it will do or what he thinks it will do," Dr. Depp continued.

"There is no quarrel with the fact that happiness is what we are seeking. We want to live, to be happy, to get the most out of life. But how? It is easy to miss the path and find ourselves utterly impoverished even while we seek riches. It has been the experience of thousands that in trying to find happiness they were miserable."

"Most of us have lived long enough to observe that not infrequently the most restless, dissatisfied, unhappy people were the most ardent devotees of pleasure, living in a merry-go-round of gayety. People who strive hard for happiness but seem to have little of it."

To be sure a man is not expected to be happy if suffering or starving, but there have been men and women with a few comforts and many hardships, who found the secret of radiant, triumphant living, Dr. Depp concluded.

GODLESS RELIGION CLAIMS ATTACKED BY CHURCH LEADER

Belief in Divine Being Is Termed Indispensable by Rev. C. C. Rasmussen.

MESSIAH IS STILL NEAR, HE AVOWS IN SERMON

Has Not Deserted Humanity in Present Time of Stress, Pastor Asserts.

"There is no religion without God," declared the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, preaching yesterday morning at the Luther Place Memorial Church, on "Where Is Thy God?"

"It is true that many just at present are advocating a nontheistic religion,' but there has never been an enduring religion without belief in God. Lacking that, we may have philosophy and 'hics, but not religion," he explained.

"Religion is as old as humanity, and, despite all its imperfections, apparently deathless, because the heart of man cries out for more than human aid in what it recognizes as its unequal battle with all the mystery, the loneliness, the perils and the burdens of life.

Religion of Early Israel.

"The religion of early Israel was alive and vibrant with this sense of the nearness of Jehovah. He was not far away. He was as close as the burning bush, no farther away than the top of Sinai. He dwelt in the sacred Ark and eventually His glory rested in Jerusalem, making it a holy city. As a present God, He was good to Israel. He chose for them a land of promise. He liberated them from the bondage of Egypt. He made a path for them through the Red Sea. He gave them manna and water in the wilderness. He gave them victory in their battles.

"But there came a day when men were more conscious of the wider horizons of existence. The idea of God was expanded to encompass all the universe. God was recognized as the Creator who transcended all spacial boundaries. He was conceived as universal. And men sensed the holiness of God so keenly as to feel that mortal and sinful man could not approach Him who occupied the throne of the heavens. Universality and holiness made Him a remote and awful God who could be approached, if at all, only through successive orders of spiritual intermediaries. God was lost from man's reach in the mysterious heights of the unexplorable. Man could give no more definite answer to the old question, 'Where is God?' Dr. Rasmussen said.

Message of Nearness.

"But when the world had thus lost God in remoteness, Jesus came into the world with His message of the nearness of God. It was not that God was less exalted or less universal than men had supposed. It was rather the glorious revelation that there is no irreconciliability between universality and nearness. Indeed when universality is truly understood it makes nearness inevitable.

"We see God's presence all about us in the order and beauty of the world. This order we ascribe to the reign of the 'laws of nature.' But the 'laws of nature' cause nothing. They are but formulation of the way in which we see things happening. The philosopher may explain what thus happens by reference to a 'principle of concretion.'

"We see God's presence wherever a helpful hand is stretched forth to minister to need. God is love, and wherever love is at work, God is at work. God is here! His battle is ceaseless till it rests in eventual triumph of the good. Let us not stand gazing up into the heavens, yearning for a departed God. See Him all about us in unwearying activity for the coming of justice and mercy and love. The universe pulsates with the moving of His spirit. Our very hearts vibrate with it. God is here! God is with us!"

Doctor Gives Blood to Save Life of Son of Gen. Treat

A physician at Casualty Hospital gave his blood yesterday in an attempt to save the life of Joseph B. Treat, 37 years old, son of Maj. Gen. Charles G. Treat, retired, once commandant at West Point, who was injured early yesterday in an automobile accident on the Marlboro pike near the District line.

Treat was in an automobile operated by Charles Fascine, of 1315 Massachusetts avenue northwest, when the car got beyond his control and struck a telegraph pole. Treat was taken to Casualty Hospital, suffering of fractures of both legs, shock and loss of blood.

Blood transfusions were found necessary and Dr. Charles Lemaster, of the hospital staff, volunteered to give his blood. After the transfusion Treat's condition was still regarded as serious. Fascine was unhurt in the accident.

Treat lives at 1818 Nineteenth street northwest.

Trio, Surprised in Theft, Outrace Police in Chase

A 30-mile chase from the District to Ellicott City, Md., was lost early yesterday by two policemen attached to the Thirteenth Precinct, who had surprised a woman and two men while they were trying to break into a store at 4911 Georgia avenue.

Patrolmen F. E. Kenney and J. R. Jenkins noticed the car parked in the rear of the store owned by Samuel Weinstein. As they approached a man ran from the shadows and leaped into the automobile, which sped out Georgia avenue to the District line.

The policemen chased the higher powered automobile into Ellicott City, where the police car was outdistanced. Weinstein reported the store had been entered but nothing was stolen.
